Speed Defense Toward War Tempo—Hull

CIO Urges New Defense Board With F.D.R. as Chairman.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—While Secretary of State Hull urged that America's arms production be speeded up toward a wartime basis, administration aides on Capitol Hill prepared to push for legislation implementing President Roosevelt's plan to lend war implements to Britain.

One expert estimated that this plan, under which the United States would take over future British war orders, pay for the materials itself and lease them to Britain, might add about $2,500,000,000 to the $15,000,000,000 authorized and appropriated by the present Congress for United States defense.

Debt Limit Raise Sought
How the additional financing would be handled was not officially explained, but Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau already has asked Congress to increase the national debt limit from $45,000,000,000 to $60,000,000,000 or $65,000,000,000. The last-named figure, financial experts believed, would boost the government's borrowing powers enough to cover British war requirements, at least in the near future.

Hull, in disclosing at a press conference that he had been urging that the production of arms, planes, ships and other materials be brought as nearly as possible to a war basis, said that this was in complete harmony with the President's plan.

CIO Offers Plan.
CIO President Philip Murray proposed creation of a new national defense board, with Roosevelt as chairman, and the setting up of employer-worker councils to co-ordinate production facilities. Under this plan, the President would appoint an equal number of employer and labor representatives to councils for basic defense industries, with one government representative to serve as chairman. The President also would name a new national defense board made up of management and labor representatives.

Talmadge Announces Selection Of 175 Georgians for His Staff

Governor-elect Eugene Talmadge yesterday announced the appointment of more than 175 prominent Georgians who will serve as members of his staff during his third term as governor of Georgia.

The Governor-elect emphasized that the appointments were not complete, since a few have not yet been accepted, and that the final list would consist of more than 200.

Service on the governor's staff is purely honorary, since members serve without pay. They have military uniforms, however, and usually are in the limelight at official functions.

Most appointees on the official staff receive the rank of lieutenant colonel. Edwin Fendig, of Brunswick, was named naval aide. The colonels are not subject to call for military service in the

HER SECOND SET—Happy Mrs. Edith Demeris, 24, holds her twin sons, born Monday in a Chicago hospital, and apparently pretty blasé over the whole thing. They're her second twins this year, a boy and girl, George and Georgiana, having been born January 4. Mrs. Demeris' husband is a produce manager for a grocery firm.

6 Are Killed Two More Families 'Adopted' In Crash of By Atlantans as Yule Present U.S. Bomber Freight Tariff Bureau Group and Service Guild Respond.

Plane Plunges Into Mountain in California National Forest.

MARCH FIELD, Cal., Dec. 18.—(P)—Six officers and men of the army's Ninety-third Bombardment Pursuit Squadron, March Field, were killed today as their 22-ton B-17 four-motored bomber crashed with the throttle apparently wide open and burned at the 6,700-foot snow line of Marion mountain in San Bernardino national forest.

Four bodies were hurled from the giant craft as it plunged into the boulder-strewn, heavily wooded mountain slope, three miles northeast of Idyllwild. The victims: First Lieutenant Harold J. Turner, pilot, Corning, Iowa; Co-Pilot Donald T. Ward, West Los Angeles; First Lieutenant Vernon McCauley, Riverside, Cal.; Engineer Staff Sergeant Thomas F. Sweet, Riverside; Assistant Engineer Corporal Frank J. Jirak, Salem, Ore.; and Radio-man Private James C. Sessions, Bisbee, Ariz.

The break two of Atlanta's neediest families deserve as their Christmas present came yesterday for Opportunity Families No. 8 and No. 11.

The employees of the Southern Freight Tariff Bureau, who contribute a nickel a week each, "adopted" young Mr. J., No. 8, a bookkeeper, with an ulcerated stomach.

The young women who compose the Service Guild of Atlanta generously "adopted" Mrs. M., No. 11, a deserted wife who has three dependent, school-age children.

The five cents a week each the employees at the Tariff Bureau, in the 101 Marietta Street building, give will mount to the $20 a month that Mr. J. and his young wife need to tide them over while he recovers and again becomes self-supporting.

The Service Guild will give Mrs. M. a Christmas present.

Your Christmas Opportunity Families No. 13 and No. 14 appear today, Atlantans. Read the stories of their troubles and see how you can help them. Christmas is only six days away. Send a donation to the Ten Opportunity families right now!

Opportunity 13

A family that is split up is your Christmas Opportunity No. 13, Atlantans.

You have the opportunity to bring them back together again. If you give, Mrs. D will have her children with her during 1941, but if you don't, they will be living in strange places with strange people.

Mrs. D's husband died a little over three years ago and left her a moderate amount of insurance money. Mrs. D was sensible enough to know it would not go far and immediately learned a vocation. Since his death, she has earned a living for herself and her three children, Paul, who is 17; Susie, 15, and 12-year-old Bill.

Four months ago Mrs. D contracted pneumonia. She was earning too much to get in a hospital for the poor, and too little to ever be sent to a hospital that charged. But there she was sent. What money she had lasted only a short time. Her children were in school. It took it all to pay for their food and the rent of their small house-keeping unit while she was in the hospital. In no time it was gone. She wrote distant kinspeople in another state and they came and got Susie and Bill. Paul refused to leave.

Paul earns a little money after school hours. Not even enough, though, to keep him in school. Mrs. D thought she would soon be well but complications have set in which are threatening and serious. She will have to rest while she recuperates slowly. But she wants her children with her. With what Paul makes, $40 a month would help Mrs. D while she convalesces and would enable her to bring Susie and Bill back to re-enter school here. When she is well again, Mrs. D will be able to be the breadwinner for her family once more. In the meantime, won't you help her? Send a

Craft Tied Up Since Denmark Was Occupied

16 Old Cargo Vessels of U. S. Sold to London Interests.

By The United Press.
WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The United States is considering taking over 37 Danish vessels which have been tied up in American ports since the German occupation of Denmark, it was disclosed tonight.

An authoritative source told the United Press that in all likelihood the ships, when taken over, would be made available to the British, who are willing to buy almost "anything that will float" to bolster their hard-pressed merchant marine.

Question Authority.
The proposal has been discussed in the last fortnight by officials of the Maritime Commission, the Treasury and Navy. No definite decisions have been reached. The question of legal authority to seize the ships and pay for them is a stumbling block.

One authority said that it might be necessary to ask congress for legislation.

Danish ship-owners have recently been negotiating disposition of the vessels with American operators in New York. A sale would first have to be approved by the Maritime Commission. It is believed certain that the commission, in conformity with President Roosevelt's policy of "aid short of war" for the British would give Britain first call on the tonnage.

150 Foreign Ships

Statistics show that there are today 150 ships of foreign registry averaging 5,000 tons in United States ports. Twenty-seven of these are Italian and two are German. There are an estimated 50 neutral vessels in Latin-American ports in addition to 56 Italian and 40 German craft tied up there since the war began. These figures do not include British ships.

British shipping interests today bought 16 old cargo vessels from the government's laid-up fleet. An announcement is expected within 48 hours of completion of arrangements under which construction will begin soon in this country on a large order of ships to bolster the British merchant fleet.

Funds Already Here.
Originally, this order was said to call for 60 new merchantmen, but it was reported that recent German submarine successes against British tonnage caused earlier estimates to be revised upward sharply.

Funds to finance this construction already are in this country, it was learned.

Marine experts reported that it probably will be necessary to expand present shipbuilding facilities in this country to take care of the new British order. Such expansion would come well within the new loan-lease armament plan which President Roosevelt said yesterday was under consideration.

Holiday Issue Second in Nation

The Atlanta Constitution's 80-page Thanksgiving paper published last month carried the second largest volume of advertising of any newspaper in the nation, according to figures just released by Media Records, Inc.

Total advertising in The Constitution's Thanksgiving issue even exceeded that of any newspaper in New York or Chicago. The issue carried 138,895 lines of advertising and this total was exceeded in a Thanksgiving issue this year only by the Buffalo Courier-Express, according to Media Records' figures.

Commissioners Log a Walter Adopt Plan To Bill Is Vetoed; Help Migrants House Agrees 12-Point Program Is Approved for Allevia- tion of Problem.

Labor commissioners of five southern states adopted a 12-point program yesterday for alleviation of the problem of migrant farm workers.

Winding up a two-day conference with officials of federal agencies, the group advocated:

1. Advance job inventories to provide information on prospective employment opportunities and check "blind migrations."
2. Federal regulation of interstate activities of public employment agencies.
3. Study of the feasibility of extending benefits of the wage-hour law to agricultural workers.
4. Extension of workmen's compensation and social security legislation to agricultural workers.
5. Appropriation of additional funds to provide "decent housing" for low-income farm families and farm laborers.
6. Appropriation of additional funds to rehabilitate and resettle farm families.
7. Adoption of uniform state laws on health, sanitation and medical care of farm families and migratory agricultural workers.
8. Extension of the Farm Security Administration's migratory labor camp program.
9. Arrangement for federal grants-in-aid to states and adoption of uniform standards of relief for migratory workers.
10. Adequate appropriation and personnel for state regulation of migratory labor.
11. Joint state and federal action to avoid stranding of labor when the defense program tapers off.
12. Extension of housing and sanitary regulations to include shelters for migratory and seasonal labor.

(Additional news on migratory workers will be found on Page 4)

Proponents of Measure Fail To Muster Two- Thirds Majority.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—(P)—The Logan-Walter bill, to broaden the jurisdiction of the courts over the activities of administrative agencies, was killed today when President Roosevelt vetoed it and the house upheld the veto.

With a two-thirds majority needed to override the veto, house proponents mustered only 153 votes on the roll-call test, 23 less than their strength on original passage, while 127 voted to sustain the President. The house vote made unnecessary any action by the senate, which had passed the bill originally 27 to 25.

Georgians who voted for overriding the veto were Representatives Brown, Camp, Cox, Tarver and Whelchel.

Representative Walter, Democrat, Pennsylvania, who had sponsored the legislation with the late Senator Logan, Democrat, Kentucky, said he would introduce the same bill again at the next session of congress starting January 3.

Mr. Roosevelt sent to the house with his veto message an analysis by Attorney General Jackson which said that the bill's "effect on defense activities wherever they are subject to it would be an increased delay and uncertainty."

The President himself said that it would "produce the utmost chaos and paralysis in the administration of the government at this critical time" and would be "an invitation to endless and innumerable controversies."

Fleeing Enemy Being Pounded Unmercifully

Graziani Retiring Deep- er Into Libya; Base Hard To Capture.

By The United Press.
CAIRO, Dec. 18.—Britain's desert offensive tonight was reported to have crashed through a maze of Italian trenches and concrete pill-boxes protecting the Libyan base of Bardia while Fascist troops fled westward along the coast under terrific air and naval assaults.

An official British communique said that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani's Fascist forces were fleeing westward toward Derna, ancient Mediterranean port 175 miles deep into Libyan territory, under merciless bombardment.

Close In On Town.
(Reports reached London late tonight that at least a part of one of two Italian divisions holding Bardia had fled westward just before the British offensive closed in upon the town and that Fascist forces were trying to fall back on Tobruk, 80 miles westward.)

Britain's land, sea and air forces united in smashing attacks at Italy's African forces all the way from mid-Libya to the head of the desert attack, smashing fighting was occurring at Kenya-Ethiopia border.

(Britain is doing everything possible to aid Selassie, exiled emperor of Ethiopia, in arousing plans to revolt against the Italians, British Undersecretary of Foreign Affairs Richard Austen Butler has told the house of commons in London.)

Although British mechanized forces have broken through the forts around Bardia, the Italians were reported to be resisting stubbornly.

'Tough Nut to Crack.'
The entire area around the town is a network of trenches, wire entanglements and concrete pill-boxes and each of these tiny forts must be stormed and taken independently, it was said.

British military officials admitted that Bardia was a "fairly tough nut to crack" and said the town appeared to be defended by one or two Italian divisions (perhaps 30,000 troops) besides units escaping from the swift British mop-up on Egyptian soil.

Tanks followed by truck-borne infantry are forming the spearhead of the desert attack, smashing at the arc of small "perimeter" forts extending along a 45-mile line.

British fighter planes as well as bombers, sweeping westward in waves, bombed and machine-gunned the retreating Italian troops along the curving coast road from Bardia to Tobruk and Derna. Tobruk, a modern town built by Mussolini and containing an excellent naval base and a large garrison, is 80 miles from the Egyptian border.

A Royal Air Force communique said that, despite heavy rains, its planes continued to attack Bardia by day and night and had started three large fires in the Fascist military encampment there. Large quantities of enemy motor transport outside the town were said to have been destroyed or damaged.

Federal Trial Of Woodward Set January 6

Evans and Greer Expected To Face U. S. Jury Later.

Trial of Floyd Woodward, 20 years a fugitive from a mail fraud indictment, has been set for January 6, according to the revised criminal calendar of United States court for the northern district of Georgia.

The government's anti-trust suit against Hiram W. Evans, John W. Greer Jr. and three companies that sold emulsified asphalt to the State Highway Board was also set for the same date, but is not expected to be reached until considerably later.

Evans, a former imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan; Greer, legislative lieutenant of Governor Rivers, and the three companies are charged with conspiring to monopolize the sale of emulsified asphalt to the state board. The two men are also under a mail fraud indictment growing out of the alleged scheme.

Woodward, supposedly the leader of a bunco ring that fleeced Georgians of thousands of dollars during the lush days after the World War, was found this fall in California, living under an assumed name. He was returned to Atlanta by Postal Inspector Herbert Graham, who spent 20 years on his trail.

Other cases on the January-February calendar include the trial of J. G. Glover, W. B. Brantley and George C. Blount on mail fraud charges growing out of a federal investigation of the State Highway Department. Glover and Brantley are under a joint indictment.

Glover, the ex-head of state convict forces, was recently found guilty in federal court of using the mails to defraud in connection with the construction of state-financed houses on land he owned.

Brantley is a former chief engineer of the board who resigned to enter the contracting business while Blount is the board's maintenance engineer.

Hearing on Glover's appeal from the jury's verdict and his attorneys' motion that the verdict be arrested has also been scheduled for January.

Also listed for the month is the case against W. A. Turner, a government witness during the Glover trial. Turner was indicted on a charge of perjury within two weeks of the trial's end.

Atlanta Doctor Says Big Feet Due to Vitamin

Shoe Average for Women, Chiropodist Declares.

By WILLARD COPE.
Duck, girls! Here comes bad news.

So, you thought it was hot stuff, eh, munching away on raw carrots that way and wolfing 'em all cooked at mealtime because they brightened the eye and were therefore part of the arsenal? (You know darned well what arsenal.)

Anyway, so you did, eh? And now just look.

Comes a Harvard anthropologist, one Professor Ernest A. Hooton, and announces that women's feet, or tooties, have undergone a "prodigious growth," and comes an Atlanta savant, Dr. Gus T. Dowling, president of the National Association of Chiropodists, and tells why.

"The good Harvard brother is entirely in the groove as far as he goes," observed Dr. Dowling, scandalized by the omission. "But he didn't tell the whole story. You know what the whole story is? I thought not. Well, I'll tell you the whole story. It's carrots, that's what it is."

"Carrots," went on Doctor Dowling, the Tech team's best friend, waving a sharp and indignant nail-snapper in a very threatening manner, "are rated at 2,700 units of Vitamin A per cup. So what happens?

"What happens is that women's feet are getting bigger. That's right. Vitamin-producing foods enlarge the feet. And kindly lay off calling them dogs. Feet are important enough to be called not dogs but feet. So kindly lay off."

This point settled, President Dowling was persuaded to lay into this new and grave national development a little farther.

"A seven shoe these days is a good average size for a woman. You can see right from there what's happening. You've guessed it! Yes, their feet are really enlarging. It isn't even fashionable any more to have a small foot. That's how things are going."

Well, there it is. We thought you'd want to hear.

WANT ME FOR CHRISTMAS?—It's Christmas time at the dog pound and it's a good time for Santa Claus to pick up the many little dogs which boys want for their stockings. Like ham and eggs, dogs and boys are an inseparable pair.

Here's a Sack Of Free Dogs For Mr. Santa

He Can Go Down to City Pound and Find Some Cute Ones.

There's a new movement under way in Atlanta. Its slogan is "Every dog out of the pound by Christmas."

Pound Master W. H. Brown suggests that he has many nice dogs which would fit into the Christmas picture. One of the largest collections of the year is on hand at this time. That's because they don't gas the dogs around Christmas time. Usually they get rid of some of them on Tuesdays and Fridays, but most of them are held over now, awaiting Christmas adoption.

The pound master and the sanitary engineer, W. H. Edwards, are recognizing the inseparable pair of boy and dog even more than ever this year. Like ham and eggs, cornbeef and cabbage, and other undividable pairs, they say there's nothing like a boy and his dog. So they're anxious for Santa Claus to select a nice companionable canine for some Christmas stocking.

Edwards has numerous telephone calls each day for dogs. Too frequently, however, the request is for a puppy, and, according to the law, only dogs over three months old can be picked up. They are cute dogs, even though they're older than puppies. They're friendly, too, and would come into many homes as a welcomed Christmas gift.

It's easy to obtain these dogs. And it's as inexpensive as almost any other Santa Claus gift. You simply call Mr. Edwards, go to the pound and select the dog that you like, then you pay the license and inoculation fees and he's yours.

Swine Breeders
To Hold Meeting
The Georgia Swine Breeders' Association will meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow for a barbecue and meat demonstration on the farm of Channing Cope in Leguim district, five miles from Covington, in Newton county.

Pork producers from every section of the state will attend. The purpose is to promote an additional source of revenue for farmers, thus aiding the movement to abandon the one-crop cotton system and practice diversified agriculture with livestock growing.

T. L. McMullan, agricultural demonstration agent for Newton county, will be among the experts taking part, and there will be representatives of the State College of Agriculture, from Athens.

The Cope farm also is used for model haying and clover demonstrations.

gests that he has many nice dogs which would fit into the Christmas picture. One of the largest collections of the year is on hand at this time. That's because they don't gas the dogs around Christmas time. Usually they get rid of some of them on Tuesdays and Fridays, but most of them are held over now, awaiting Christmas adoption.

The pound master and the sanitary engineer, W. H. Edwards, are recognizing the inseparable pair of boy and dog even more than ever this year. Like ham and eggs, cornbeef and cabbage, and other undividable pairs, they say there's nothing like a boy and his dog. So they're anxious for Santa Claus to select a nice companionable canine for some Christmas stocking.

Edwards has numerous telephone calls each day for dogs. Too frequently, however, the request is for a puppy, and, according to the law, only dogs over three months old can be picked up. They are cute dogs, even though they're older than puppies. They're friendly, too, and would come into many homes as a welcomed Christmas gift.

It's easy to obtain these dogs. And it's as inexpensive as almost any other Santa Claus gift. You simply call Mr. Edwards, go to the pound and select the dog that you like, then you pay the license and inoculation fees and he's yours.

Swine Breeders
To Hold Meeting
The Georgia Swine Breeders' Association will meet at 11 o'clock tomorrow for a barbecue and meat demonstration on the farm of Channing Cope in Leguim district, five miles from Covington, in Newton county.

Pork producers from every section of the state will attend. The purpose is to promote an additional source of revenue for farmers, thus aiding the movement to abandon the one-crop cotton system and practice diversified agriculture with livestock growing.

T. L. McMullan, agricultural demonstration agent for Newton county, will be among the experts taking part, and there will be representatives of the State College of Agriculture, from Athens.

The Cope farm also is used for model haying and clover demonstrations.

Officials Probe Suspected Plot To Wreck Train

N. C. & St. L.'s Dixie Limited Escapes Derailment.

Highly suspicious circumstances and clues, indicating a possible attempt to wreck the N. C. & St. L. railroad's northbound "Dixie Limited," one and one-half miles north of Marietta early Tuesday night, were being carefully probed yesterday by railroad officials.

Pieces of railroad tie and 11 angle bars, some of which bore marks that might have been made by the impact of a locomotive, were found near the scene and studied by Tom Dunn, of Nashville, chief of the railroad's police, and his aides.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation said their assistance had not yet been sought. While higher officials of the railroad were unwilling to express the definite belief such an attempt had been made, they referred to the reports made by Conductor J. J. Hardy and Engineer J. E. Hamilton, both of Atlanta, who were certain something untoward had been staged.

Hardy notified the Nashville general office shortly after 7:23 o'clock, when the limited train left Marietta, that he and Hamilton were certain the train had crashed through at least one tie, and possibly angle bars, placed upon the tracks.

The train had not been derailed, but there was a fully discernible bump of some kind, officials said the two reported. Hamilton stopped the flyer at the next small station so that Hardy could telephone word of the occurrence.

It was declared that Dunn would complete his investigation and report to Nashville headquarters. No reasonable explanation of the happening could be made, officials said.

Aycock Clemency Plea Is Denied by Governor

Further executive clemency for William B. Aycock Sr., of Savannah, now serving a life sentence for a slaying his wife she committed, was denied yesterday by Governor Rivers.

Marvin Griffin, the Governor's executive secretary, said the clemency appeal, presented at a hearing a week ago, was turned down because it was not considered justifiable.

Migrant Like A Pioneer in Quest for Work

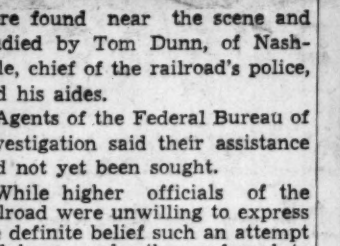

He Follows the Harvest, Relying Forever on His Courage.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

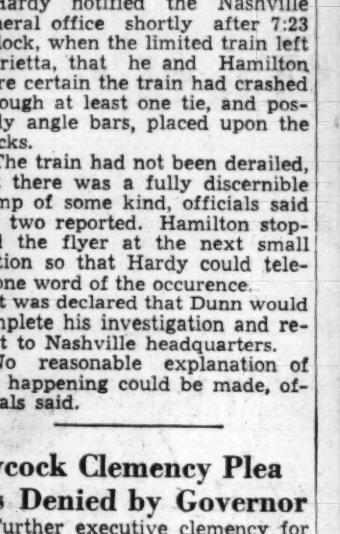

The migratory farm worker is the spiritual descendent of the pioneer who blazed the trails into the west. He is motivated by the same impulse—to find a place where he can make a living for himself and his family. His primary characteristics are the same, namely, restlessness, courage, and a willingness to work like a dog when he finds work to do.

His weaker brother, driven out of employment by the same things that set him adrift, sits down at home and goes on relief. He, tougher, piles his wife and the younguns in his ancient jalopy and hits the road.

Little but grief awaits him. Often he can't get where he's going and finds himself stranded in some far-off community, a subject of charity himself, if for nothing more than the gift of gasoline to get him going again. Sometimes he gets to his destination to find no work, and starva-

Labor Burden Is Lessened on Georgia Farms

Study Shows Steady Decrease in Amount of Work Needed.

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 18.—(P)—Hard-toiling Georgia farmers may not realize it, but economists of the University of Georgia have figured out that the amount of work necessary to maintain farms in the state has decreased considerably since 1919.

By 1934, the work required annually had dropped 32 per cent, according to a study directed by J. William Firor, head of the University's Department of Agricultural Economics. He pointed out the number of Georgia farm workers had decreased only about 13 per cent, thus causing the state to have a surplus of farm labor.

Firor asserted that one of the principal factors in determining the amount of farm work needed is the acreage of various crops. Cotton requires 137 hours per acre per year; corn 31 hours, and oats only 13 hours. Tobacco, peaches and peanuts are crops demanding many hours of labor.

A peak in hours of work and employment on Georgia farms was reached in 1919. Citing the argument that farm machinery is to blame for reducing the number of workers needed, the economist suggested this might be a somewhat inaccurate view by pointing out that otherwise would not be out that machines perform many done.

Firor declared the solution of the problem of insufficient farm work must be either a higher average income from production at the present level or more production. He struck a note of optimism by saying that "since 1934 there has been a striking improvement in the cash income received by Georgia farmers, a slight increase in available work on farms and a slight increase in the available workers on farms."

He described as a recent trend of "very great importance" the expanding employment of Georgia farm people in defense activities, some directly and others through increased production.

back on the land from which they came, and which they left because the land wore out, the short tenure of the sharecropper cut them loose at the end of each year, or mechanized farming drove them out.

Labor Burden Is Lessened on Georgia Farms

Study Shows Steady Decrease in Amount of Work Needed.

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 18.—(P)—Hard-toiling Georgia farmers may not realize it, but economists of the University of Georgia have figured out that the amount of work necessary to maintain farms in the state has decreased considerably since 1919.

By 1934, the work required annually had dropped 32 per cent, according to a study directed by J. William Firor, head of the University's Department of Agricultural Economics. He pointed out the number of Georgia farm workers had decreased only about 13 per cent, thus causing the state to have a surplus of farm labor.

Firor asserted that one of the principal factors in determining the amount of farm work needed is the acreage of various crops. Cotton requires 137 hours per acre per year; corn 31 hours, and oats only 13 hours. Tobacco, peaches and peanuts are crops demanding many hours of labor.

A peak in hours of work and employment on Georgia farms was reached in 1919. Citing the argument that farm machinery is to blame for reducing the number of workers needed, the economist suggested this might be a somewhat inaccurate view by pointing out that otherwise would not be out that machines perform many done.

Firor declared the solution of the problem of insufficient farm work must be either a higher average income from production at the present level or more production. He struck a note of optimism by saying that "since 1934 there has been a striking improvement in the cash income received by Georgia farmers, a slight increase in available work on farms and a slight increase in the available workers on farms."

He described as a recent trend of "very great importance" the expanding employment of Georgia farm people in defense activities, some directly and others through increased production.

For CHRISTMAS—Give Yourself a GOOD HEAD OF HAIR

When you were born, Nature presented your scalp with the structure necessary to grow hair. Your hair DID grow until some local scalp trouble, such as dandruff (dry scales or greasy-pasty scalp film), itchy scalp, or abnormal hair-fall made it impossible for your hair growing structure to continue to function normally. Thomas treatment overcomes the 14 local scalp ills which lead to baldness... dandruff disappears, abnormal hair-fall stops, and normal hair growth is promoted. Why not give yourself a good head of hair for Christmas? Call today for a free scalp examination.

Hearing Is Set For January 3 In Road Case

MacDougall Firm's Lawyer Says 'Another Matter To Be Presented.'

A hearing scheduled for today before Superior Judge Lee B. Wyatt at LaGrange, on a temporary court order restricting State Highway Department expenditures has been re-set for January 3.

B. D. Murphy, attorney for the MacDougall Construction Company of Atlanta, which brought the injunction proceedings, said, however, that "another matter will be presented to Judge Wyatt." He declined to reveal its nature.

Murphy said he had made the motion to postpone the injunction hearing until January 3.

The construction company obtained the original restraining order against the highway department November 11, preventing the highway board from making further expenditures until a debt of approximately $169,000 had been paid to the MacDougall Company. The order subsequently was modified by Judge Wyatt to permit the highway board to carry on routine functions and maintenance operations, spending not more than $100,000 for new equipment and materials.

Bath To Erect Two New Ship Building Berths

President of Iron Works Announces General Wage Increase.

BATH, Maine, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The Bath Iron Works, Inc., building destroyers for the navy, announced today plans for expansion of its shipyard to permit erection of two new building berths, increasing to eight the number of yard ways.

Simultaneously, President William S. Newell said that, effective December 30, a general wage increase of six cents per hour to the 3,200 employees would be made, entailing about $450,000 annually.

This was the second wage increase this year, a 6 per cent raise having been granted previously.

The corporation has three destroyers on the ways now and holds navy contracts for 27 more which will be built within the next three and a half years. Four were launched this year.

Dealer in Stocks Gives Himself Up

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Joseph Warren Burden, stock dealer and investment counselor, surrendered at the district attorney's office today to an indictment charging grand larceny, doing business while insolvent and unlawfully using customers' securities.

Assistant District Attorney Bernard Katzen said that Burden's customers included Playwright Robert E. Sherwood and that $13,000 was taken from Sherwood's account and partial restitution made. He said $107,000 had been taken from the account of Mary Brandon Sherwood, the playwright's first wife, and later partially restored.

Katzen also stated that an examination of Burden's books showed that the dealer, who lived at Mt. Kisco, N. Y., had been insolvent from 1929 through 1940. The insolvency was $129,000 in '29, he said, and $275,000 this year.

Teacher Disappears From Home in Augusta

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The family, school authorities and police were puzzled today at the disappearance of Miss Inez Barchan, for 11 years a teacher at the John S. Davidson Grammar school. Miss Barchan left home yesterday afternoon to do some errands downtown and to visit a friend. Police said they were unable to find any trace of her.

Juliana Pays Visit to Home Of Washington

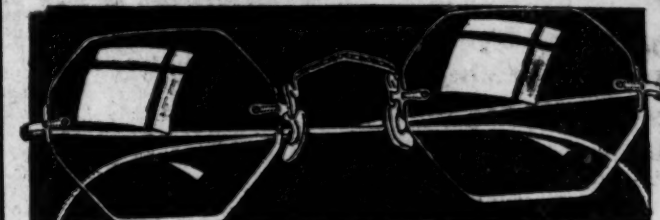

Crown Princess Exclaims Over Lack of Cupboards in Rooms.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—(UP)—Crown Princess Juliana, of the Netherlands, today began her three-day visit here as a White House guest by inspecting George Washington's home in near-by Mount Vernon, Va., and expressing surprise at the smallness of its rooms.
With the critical eye of the Dutch housewife, the titled woman who may one day rule over her country, now occupied by the Germans, said to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, her guide:
"Why, there are no cupboards in the rooms! Where did they hang their clothes?"

She was surprised, too, to find that the kitchen was a small house to itself and nodded in understanding when Mrs. Roosevelt explained that the rooms purposely were kept small because it was difficult to heat larger ones with a fireplace.
Clad in a blond mink coat, black dress, black hat and black shoes, the crown princess repeatedly had to be warned to avoid fresh paint evident everywhere as part of the "spring cleaning" which is done in the winter when there are fewer tourists.
During her visit, the crown princess turned the tables on newspaper photographers by posing for her royal guest, the crown princess said smilingly:

"I already did it."

What's the advantage of LIQUEUR Scotch?

Just this: "liqueur" Scotch means the very pick of choice, mellow Scotch whiskies. It's a sign of superior quality the world over.

Every drop of Martin's is special "liqueur" Scotch—the label tells you so. Martin's is also 88 proof instead of the usual 86.8 . . . goes just a bit farther.

Martin's sells for no more than most brands. Call for it and enjoy "liqueur" quality at no extra cost.

SHE HELPS—Alice Marble, pretty American tennis star, looked over an ambulance to be sent Britain as she accepted chairmanship of the British-American Ambulance Corps sports committee yesterday.

Alice Marble In Drive for Air Ambulance

Will Seek Type That Can Rescue RAF Pilots at Sea.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Alice Marble, the tennis champion who raised enough money through lectures to send an automobile ambulance to Britain, accepted today chairmanship of the tennis division of the British-American ambulance corps.
She announced her division's goal would be to raise $65,000 for an airplane ambulance, the type used to rescue RAF pilots who are shot down over the sea. She will form her own committee, on which she plans to have, among others, Don Budge and Mary Hardwick, who will help Miss Marble make her pro tennis debut at Madison Square Garden January 6.

County Jurors Will Continue Meter Probe

Charges of 'Tampering' Made by Mayor, Being Studied.

The Fulton county grand jury will continue today its investigation of charges of "meter tampering" in connection with operation of the city's water works department.
The jury began its probe yesterday and questioned W. Zode Smith, superintendent of the department, and several other employees besides examining numerous records. Smith was closeted with the jury for more than an hour.
The charges were made by Mayor Hartsfield, who requested the grand jury probe, after Smith had told him that his own investigation had developed clear evidence of "meter tampering."
Since the solicitor general's office has been making a thorough investigation and this evidence is being submitted to the grand jury. While no bills have been drawn, it was learned definitely last night that indictments will be presented to the jury, probably this morning.

Bandit Calls Man By His Nickname

M. E. Roberts yesterday was unable to identify two men who entered his Carnegie Way apartment late Tuesday night, called him by his nickname, and left with 191 of his dollars.
"They knocked on the door and entered," Roberts said. "One of them stuck a pistol in my ribs and said, 'Turn around, Gene.' I don't remember ever having seen either of them before."
Then the thieves bound him, threw him on the bed and cut the telephone wires before leaving. The whole operation was carried out so quickly and quietly that the occupant of the room across the hall never knew anything was amiss until he was summoned by Roberts.

STOCK SALES END
LAGRANGE, Ga., Dec. 18.—The monthly cattle and hog sale, held yesterday at the city stockyards, ended the fall sales for this community, according to Joe Hawkins, county agricultural agent. Mr. Hawkins said total sales were $3,092, representing the sale of 139 head of cattle and 27 hogs.

'GWTW' Servants Will Receive Gifts

Those old servants who served the lords and masters of the old plantation South—the ex-slaves—will be honored at their own Christmas party again this Christmas Eve.

Only about 30 of them are still alive in Fulton county, 10 less than the number who attended the Christmas Eve party last year.

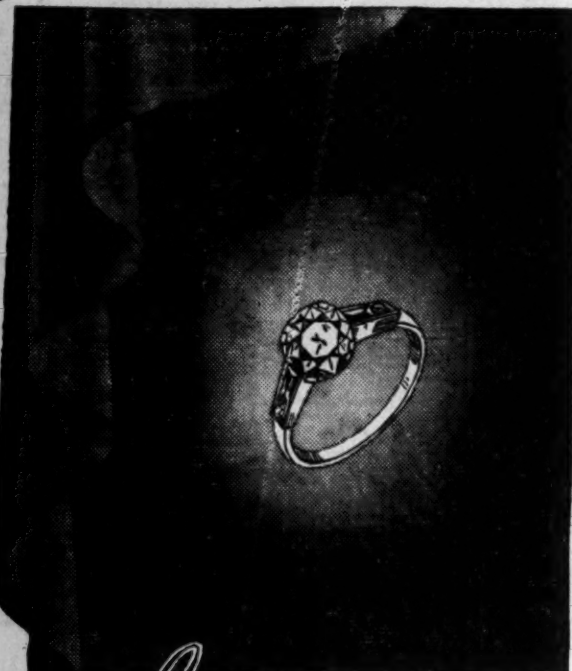

Their ages range from 103 on down to 84.

The Ex-Slave Association this year, as it has for the past 23, will give the party and presents to the ex-slaves at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning in the chapel of the Holmes Institute, 376 Bedford Place. Clothing, shoes, blankets and other such presents will be given.

Object of the association is to see that none of the old ex-slaves suffer from lack of warm clothing and food.

British Admit Victory Lies in Invading Axis

Great Army Is Alert in Britain for Hitler's Attack.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—(P)—Newly warned today against the danger of German invasion, Great Britain has mobilized a million Home Guardsmen and thousands of coast defense and mobile troops in her constant vigil for the approach of Adolf Hitler's threatened armadas.

At the same time, the government officially admitted that the empire could not win the war until the British Army had "struck—and struck deep—into the Axis countries."

A ministry of information spokesman said the British blockade would weaken Germany and Italy, and the Navy and air force would shake the confidence of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

Army Is Victory Weapon.

"But the weapon which ultimately will enforce submission of the enemy is the Army," the spokesman said, adding that Britain now has about 3,000,000 men under arms.

Britons 36 years old were ordered to register January 17-18 for duty with the armed forces.

The new call-up is expected to make about 250,000 more men available for Britain's fast-expanding Army.

Truckloads of military supplies sped along coastal highways of this island kingdom, in preparation for Hitler's long-awaited "Der Tag."

The war office has issued new restrictions against the wearing of uniforms by unauthorized persons, presumably to guard against "Fifth Column" operations; and the admiralty called for volunteers for the marine corps.

Moon, Tide Favor Invasion.

Noting Cabinet Minister Lord Beaverbrook's warning that "the enemy is making preparations for the invasion of Britain even before springtime comes," observers said the new threat is particularly grave because the Germans might attempt either a mass invasion or isolated raids to relieve the pressure on the Italians in Albania and Africa.

The moon and tides will favor either invasion or raids from now until Christmas, and attackers would have the benefit of channel fogs and 16-hour-long nights. "Naturally we're on the alert," a British spokesman said. "It would be just like Hitler to try to spoil our Christmas or at least try to make us nervous by moving men and boats around on his side of the channel."

One patrol of home guardsmen noted in a coastal area was armed with American Springfield rifles and Browning 20-shot automatic rifles.

London Again Spared.

Meanwhile, bomb-wise Londoners went into their second successive night without an alert for one of their longest raid-free periods since September.

The British capital had a similar bombless period last week, ending after 48 hours and 51 minutes with a major pounding from the Nazis the night of December 8.

Adding to the mystery of the Luftwaffe's absence was the fact that the channel was clear of mist for the first time in weeks, though the sky was cloudy.

Keeping up its own air offensive, the RAF roared through last night's rain squalls to blast the German industrial center of Mannheim for the second straight night, the air ministry announced. German-held channel ports and airdromes also were attacked.

American Aid May Be Too Late, Italy Says

Arms Useless After Britain's Fall, Duce's Paper Asserts.

MILAN, Italy, Dec. 18.—(P)—Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo D'Italia, said today "The question for us is not whether the United States can manufacture all the projected armaments" for England—"but when?"

"The arms which America produces after Britain collapses are useless," said the paper. "There is, therefore, a date unpredictable and fatal after which the possession of masses of war material will serve America no better than do the masses of gold in the cellars of Fort Knox."

"The tragedy of the English isle

. . . is that of a starving man who sees death approaching while in a far-off country grain is being ground to save him. Airplanes which don't fly, cannons which don't shoot, because they don't exist, may serve to win an election but not a war."

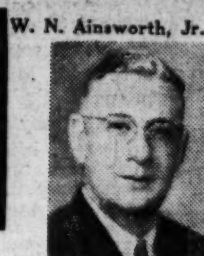

SILENCE SIGNIFICANT. NAZI SPOKESMAN SAYS

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—(P)—While President Roosevelt's plan to lend war materials to Britain drew no official comment here today, one spokesman said, "Silence sometimes may have a significance of its own."

LITERARY LIGHT—Ward Greene, former Atlanta newspaperman and now executive editor of a national feature syndicate, was in Atlanta yesterday on a brief visit. His fifth novel, "Route 28," has been recently published. He is a graduate of the University of the South.

Ward Greene Laval Seeking Visits Here on 'Reconcile' Business Trip U. S. and Hitler

Ex-Atlanta Reporter Now Successful Novelist, Syndicate Editor.

Ward Greene, who once covered fires, murder trials and other comparable exciting things for an Atlanta newspaper until he traded them for a fling as a foreign correspondent, was back in Atlanta on a visit yesterday, now executive editor of a national feature syndicate and with five successful novels to his credit.

His most recent literary achievement, "Route 28," a story of life along one of New Jersey's famous highways, was published this fall.

Greene's heyday in journalism here was the time when the Leo Frank case was consuming most of the front pages. The material he gained covering this courthouse story was basis for his fourth novel, "Death in the Deep South."

On leaving Atlanta, Greene went with the New York Tribune, and from there to Europe as a foreign correspondent. Since 1921 he has held his present job with the feature syndicate.

Between times he has found time to write his novels and his play. His first book was "Cora Potts," in 1929, and its locale was Macon and Atlanta. The next year he followed this with "Ride the Nightmare," and 1932 his "Weep No More," a story about Atlanta during the prohibition days, was published. His play, "Honey," was released in 1937.

While on his current brief business trip to Atlanta he is stopping at the Piedmont hotel, where he has been visited by many old friends. He is a graduate of the University of the South, where he was a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity.

Captain Blows Farewell as He And Ship Sink

Three Babies Among 152 Survivors of Torpedoed Liner.

A WESTERN BRITISH PORT, Dec. 18.—(AP)—A rescue ship today landed 152 survivors of the torpedoed liner Western Prince, including three babies saved in coal scuttles.

At least 16 persons, 10 of them crewmen aboard the 10,926-ton British liner, perished during the rescue work following the submarine attack 550 miles off the Irish coast last Saturday.

The 53 surviving passengers praised Captain John Reed, who went down with his ship, and other members of the crew for their courage.

Before Captain Reed went down with his ship, he gave three blasts of the whistle as a farewell to the rescue ship.

"Everybody on board was as brave as lions," said Mrs. James Tamblin, of Norfolk, Va., wife of a food ministry employee making her third wartime crossing. She rewarded sailors of the rescue ship with a kiss each.

"Captain Reed, Second Officer R. F. White and Steward Franks were the last men to remain aboard," said Canadian Munitions Minister C. D. Howe, one of the survivors. "White was picked up by a raft, but Reed and Franks were lost."

Franks, safe in a lifeboat, went back for the crew's contributions to the Spitfire (airplane) fund, and returned too late for a lifeboat.

Seven persons, including Gordon Scott, of Montreal, financial adviser to Howe, were lost when their lifeboat containing 26 persons capsized upon striking the side of the rescue ship.

The rest of Howe's party were saved.

A London advertising man, Percy Linden, returning from the United States, found himself a nursemaid shortly after the three infants, the oldest of whom was 18 months, were hauled aboard the rescue ship in coal baskets.

Move To Adjourn Congress Is Seen

Ambulance Too Costly, Patient Boards a Bus

DAVENPORT, Ia., Dec. 18.—(AP)—"Where to?" asked the city ambulance driver as he loaded a homebound patient into his vehicle at a hospital here.

"Bettendorf," the convalescing patient, a woman, replied.

"That's outside the city limits and it'll cost you $5," said the driver.

Before he could obtain her name, she jumped out of the stretcher, headed for a nearby street corner and boarded a bus.

Greeks Defeat Italian King's Honor Guard

Evzones, With Bayonets, Drive Grenadiers Into Palermo.

ATHENS, Dec. 18.—(UP)—The honor guard of Italian King Victor Emmanuel, the Fourth Grenadiers, has been defeated in a bitter battle on the Albanian coastal front after temporarily seizing several important Greek positions in a counter-attack, it was reported tonight.

The Italians, led by the Grenadier Guards, were said to have launched two strong attacks from Porto Palermo and to have seized a series of positions before the Greeks, bringing into action mortars captured from the Fascists, drove them back into Porto Palermo.

The King's personal bodyguards were said to have been routed when Greek Evzone troops, aided by mortars, charged them with their long bayonets.

Both British and Greek planes attacked Italian columns moving along icy roads toward Valona, bombing and machine-gunning them in dive-bombing tactics.

The attacking Italians were reported to have set fire to many villages, the flames lighting up mountain valleys on the southern front.

The Italian losses were said in reports from the front to have been "exceedingly heavy."

Greek mountain artillery was said in an official communique to have set fire to the heavily defended town of Klisura, 27 miles southeast of the seaport of Valona and 10 miles east of the key town of Tepelini, also under heavy siege.

Avalanches of snow have become a menace to both Italian and Greek fighters at the front, it was reported in military dispatches. The repercussions of heavy artillery are loosening and bringing down hundreds of tons of snow and rocks, sweeping away men, guns and mules.

Why France Fell

Bit by bit the true story of the Battle of France is being revealed, both by military analysis and staff reports and through personal revelations of diplomatic and military observers.

One of the most revealing is the personal diary of Major Philip Gribble, air intelligence liaison officer at advanced headquarters, north, in France. Almost at the start of his account, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, Major Gribble speaks of communications being sabotaged at the Air Component headquarters at Mareuil at almost the hour of the Nazi invasion of Holland and Belgium and then of the loss of planes on the ground from German bombing operations. Air Marshal Barratt arrived at headquarters at 10:35 o'clock "smiling and happy, sucking his pipe." Immediately thereafter: "there is no news yet from the reconnaissance sent out this morning by the A.C.F.F." Later he remarks that general headquarters seem to have been caught off guard and adds it is the old story of crying "wolf." Quite a few people away on leave, as Gribble puts it. He comments on the fact that there are "no messages, no intelligence summaries, no telephone."

One of the most pertinent observations, and one which must give great weight to his other opinions, is this, written on May 13 (the third day of the invasion): "A strange and, I feel, very suspicious feature has been the extraordinary lack of any bombing of the BEF and the French armies in their advance through Belgium during the last four days. It looks almost as if the Germans want us where we are going." It is turned out, that exactly was what the Germans did wish, and as soon as the maneuver was completed the blow struck at Sedan began the encirclement operation which was clinaxed by the unequalled withdrawal through Dunkerque.

The Sedan sector, Major Gribble says, was heavily fortified and a break-through there in his estimation and based upon a personal survey of the line, should have cost the Nazis half a million casualties. However, he reveals that the "most inferior of the French divisions were posted there to hold it." They were mostly Parisians, Major Gribble reports, and their morale was "of the very lowest order." As it was, the Germans broke through fortifications five miles in depth with a loss of "probably 500 men," after dive bombers had broken the French resistance in two hours. It is pertinent that Major Gribble pointedly reveals there were hardly any casualties to French troops. They died, purely and simply.

From then on the diary chiefly is an account of doubt and hesitancy, sometimes on the part of the British command, but chiefly of French indecision and delay and an incredible lack of discipline and morale in many French units. He reveals that the British air corps was bombing Essen all the while that closely packed German columns were pouring along every main road in the battle area without being subjected to air attack. Several times it would have been possible to turn the tables. That they were not turned is now very, very evident.

Certainly, repercussions of the Italian collapse are felt in Berlin. When the pug loses decision, it's his manager they have to fan.

Smoking in Court

The issue of to smoke or not to smoke in courtroom has been decided, it is stated in the news reports, by the superior court judges of Fulton county. Against the smokers. It is said that no person may smoke henceforth while the jury is in the box.

A courtroom foggy with tobacco smoke does not conjure up a picture of the austerity of justice, yet, on the other hand, a judge who is too rigid in his rules of decorum for spectators and court attaches alike is apt to be accused of smothering the human factor in the dispensing of the law and its findings. As a matter of fact, it seems that each individual judge is the sole arbiter of such rules for the court over which he presides. There is no law against smoking in court, if the judge does not forbid it. So, ruling or no ruling, it can only be by voluntary agreement among the jurists that uniform practice on this issue can be attained.

A feeling grows that the self-appointed masters of the new Europe may have overestimated their strength, like the shoplifter in the piano department.

"Man Those Guns Aft"

Should the Italian people be considered a fantastically stupid lot, they have none but their leaders to thank for this distinction. Obvious butt of a thousand jokes, the musical-comedy army which Mussolini and Badoglio put together has been everywhere praised for its astounding endurance on the long-distance run across Albania, has been hooted at and jeered at until the Fascist heroes have replaced Mae West, Little Audrey and every other American hero as the subject matter of our intensest wit.

But the cleverest remarks made about the Italians pale before the explanations their apologists offer for them. In the long roll of ineane mouthings with which Virginio Gayda has harangued his flock, few imbecilities rival his explanation of why the Italian navy has been so completely disgraced in the Mediterranean. "Italian ships," he apologized, "have very weak fire-power on the rear decks." Explaining that Italian vessels were built to fight the slow and clumsy French ships, Gayda vehemently attacked what he described the treachery of the English in pursuing the fleeing Italians so that they were forced to fire their rear guns instead of their powerful forward ones. In the light of Italian military history, it would seem that the most expedient course would have been to put the heaviest fire power on the rear of the ships, anyhow.

This apology now lies along side those other tales with which the Italians have been placated: that the Greeks were guilty of treachery by using bayonets and by having a larger army than the Italians thought; that the British were barbarians for pursuing the Italians out of Egypt, and that Mussolini was in no wise responsible for the Greek debacle because Badoglio had already told several friends of his that his troops in Albania were insufficient to their purpose.

Are there funnier people anywhere? They knew little then of vitamins, but the old-time recipe started off with "take a quart of thick cream and 15 eggs—"

Accidents

All of us are apt, at times, to think that fate has handed us an unfairly severe blow. We are inclined to believe, at some time or other in our lives, that the freak of chance has picked us out as victims.

Well, consider what fate did to Bob Forde, of California. He was taking an exercise run along a quiet road. Saw two men, walking, approaching him. They were side by side, but rather far apart. Forde decided to run between them. They were carrying a sheet of window glass!

Or think of the case of that man standing on a safety island on a Chicago street, waiting for a street car. A taxicab swerved to avoid striking another car. The cab's rear door flew open and scooped up the innocent street car waiter, depositing him on the floor of the cab. And there was an Iowan, a furnace repair man, who slipped and fell when hurrying to answer the telephone. He managed to lift the receiver and the man on the phone was the local doctor, asking for someone to do something to his broken furnace. "You'd better come over here, doc," said the furnace man, "and mend my broken leg, first."

Don't think you're so unlucky, in future, without pausing to consider these utterly unexpected accidents, and others like them.

Arriving in Miami, the Duke and Wally go into virtual seclusion, but only for a while. The love affair of the century resumes after redecoration.

ITALIAN SETBACK IN EGYPT

The pyramids, which for many centuries have watched the rise and fall of men's ambitions, again look upon a changing scene, again see a defeat for Rome . . . as "On Mussolini, swaggering imitator of the Caesars, humiliations rain thick and fast," says the ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, which finds Italian Fascism and "its bullying chief" facing "their gloomiest hour since the march on Rome 18 years ago."

"All the signs indicate that something is wrong in Italy," feels the NEW YORK TIMES, which believes "the half-hearted war the Italians have been waging reflects not merely the state of public opinion . . . but deep dissensions within the government, exacerbated, it seems clear, by strains in the Axis itself." In the same vein, the RICHMOND TIMES-DISPATCH adds the thought that, "If the reverses keep up," Mussolini's "downfall will be inevitable," although "Whether that will mean a German occupation of Italy is a question." The TIMES-DISPATCH cites reports that the Fuehrer may be planning "to oust the Duce for someone more amenable to orders from Berlin."

THE SEATTLE TIMES comments that "With his legions on the backward run . . . Mussolini gets orders from Hitler, not to turn and fight, but to compel Italian farmers to raise more food for Germany," which the TIMES sees as constituting "signs of distress from within the aggressor nations." And the MEMPHIS COMMERCIAL APPEAL calls Mussolini "never more than a political opportunist," declaring that "so long as he confined himself to purely political activities, he was a success of sorts," adding the thought that "the events of the past few days indicate that (Victor) Emmanuel may soon be King of Italy in fact instead of fancy."

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

WHY DON'T THE GERMANS HELP? WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—Now that Mussolini has topped his fiasco in Greece with a disaster in Egypt, everyone wants to know why Hitler does not come to the aid of his ally. A convincing, though tentative answer to this puzzling question, is offered by high American military and diplomatic authorities who believe the German high command is unwilling to risk in the Mediterranean strength needed for the attack on Britain.

Hitler cannot help Mussolini at sea, since his naval power is inconsiderable. On land, because of the failure of his diplomatic offensive, he cannot reach the Greek theater without either risking battle with the Turks in the inhospitable, trackless and snow-bound Bulgarian Balkans, or fighting an equally unpromising engagement with the Yugoslavs, or trying to transport an army from Italy, across the dangerous Adriatic, into the tiny and much-bombarded ports of Albania.

He has just the rescue the Italians in Egypt by sending a force across the western Mediterranean, through French Africa, into Libya, but Marshal Petain is still firm against use of the French colonies as German bases. Transit to Libya through the Eastern Mediterranean is shut off by the British navy. Thus Hitler's vast land armies are useless in the present situation, unless he cares to take over Italy almost in toto, and substitute German efficiency for the slipshod methods of the Fascists. This is, of course, a definite possibility. Some informed persons even think Hitler has purposely let Mussolini get himself so deeply involved in order to make the taking-over process easier.

SAVING AIR STRENGTH

Meanwhile, however, unless Hitler chooses to extend his already huge commitments to include the Italian peninsula, the question still remains why he has not at least sent the Italians aid in the air. The answer is that given above, air strength being precisely the strength which the German high command is husbanding for the spring onslaught against the British Isles.

The course of German air strategy since the beginning of the battle of Britain is extremely interesting. Three successive errors were made, according to our authorities. First there were daylight attacks without precise objective. Then there were daylight attacks against London. And then there were night attacks against London. The daylight attacks were repulsed, with heavy German losses, by the British fighters. The night attacks on London had comparatively little effect because of the size of the target. Now Hitler's favorite personal strategy of terror has been laid aside, having proved useless against the magnificent British morale. Instead, a more logical, less psychological plan, based on tested principles of war, has been adopted. Under this plan, the Germans are keeping up a steady pressure of night attacks on Britain, using force of five hundred planes a night, and launching an attack in force on a key industrial city, similar to the raid on Coventry, whenever a clear, moonlit night offers a good opportunity. At the same time, the Germans are using their four-engine bombers to reinforce their submarine blockade of British trade. Not long ago, one of the big German bombers was found and engaged by a British patrol plane some 400 miles to the west of the British Isles. As this new bombing type comes into quantity production, the problem created by the big bombers will grow more serious.

Yet this still seems a limited use of the German air force. Although German planes recently brought down over Britain have given indications of a possible German explosive shortage, there is little doubt that Hitler has sufficient air reserves for fighting in the Mediterranean. If reserves are thus deflected, however, they will not be ready in the spring for the main effort to bring the British to their knees. And therefore, it is thought here, German air aid for Italy may also continue to be withheld.

BRITISH PLANE PRODUCTION

The fact that the Germans are apparently gathering all possible force for the spring struggle highlights the problem of Britain's supplies of planes. Fortunately, even the new raids on the Coventry pattern have not proved so devastating as many people at first feared. In the entire British industry, only two factories have been really seriously hit, according to reports received here. Other factories have been put out of production for periods ranging from one day to several by interruption of their power, transportation and water facilities. Production has also been slowed down by the destruction of the homes of many workmen. Yet on balance, although the planned increase in British air output has been cut down pretty considerably, production is still increasing.

In truth, the heart of the British supply problem is not in beleaguered Britain, but in the United States. Here important British orders have not yet been placed. Exceedingly pressing questions, such as whether to manufacture the perfected British fighter model, and its magnificent 2,000 horse power liquid-cooled engine, have not yet been settled. Existing capacity is not yet being utilized to the fullest advantage. In view of the striking power the Germans will probably have by spring, this country has little time to lose if we are to meet Britain's needs.

To Make An Old Man Happy.

At this Christmas time opportunity has been laid before this column to make an old man, an invalid, happy. Now this does mean that everyone who'd be happy to see some personal story in print is to rush in with a lot of similar requests. For it is the sort of thing that can't be done often.

But, at this season of the year if we can bring happiness to one good old soul, why not do it?

So, right here and now, we're going to publish portions of a letter, received from the wife of this aforesaid invalid man. She writes: "My husband, Benjamin L. Camp, of Whitesburg, Ga., is an invalid, confined to his bed with arthritis. He reads The Constitution from cover to cover, daily. It has been his standby for at least 58 years. He was 69 last July. . . . He has a number of old papers that he prizes and during his long illness (seven years) has shown them frequently to our neighbors. He has recently read little stories in The Constitution concerning certain old papers owned by certain Georgians and he longs to read something in the paper about his old papers."

Sale Papers

On Negress.

The oldest paper he has is a Bill of Sale for a certain "Negro woman named Kate." She was sold for 97.10 pounds Virginia money. It was Benjamin Carr, of Halifax county, N. C., to Tobias Lassette, of Nash county, N. C. The paper was witnessed by John Harrison and Peter Anderson on the 24th day of January, 1799.

"This is an older paper than the ones that have been noted recently in The Constitution." Would you be kind enough to make a little story about this and publish it at your earliest convenience? Little personal interests like this cheer him up for many days. He is so shut-in.

"He is the son of Walter C. Camp, who became a Confederate soldier at the age of 15. Walter C. Camp was named for Governor Walter Colquitt, who was a personal friend of my husband's grandfather, Wesley Camp. Wesley Camp, lived once in Douglas, once in Campbell and twice in Carroll counties, yet never changed his residence. This was due to the various changes made in the county lines . . .

"Among his papers my husband has a receipt given to his grand father, Wesley Camp, for corn he sold to the Confederate States of

To Break Deadlock

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—The latest Rooseveltian ruse of having the St. Lawrence waterway and power project approved by legislation rather than by treaty ratification, if it legally holds, almost certainly will break a deadlock which has held this enterprise in leash for more than 25 years.

Through all of that time American Presidents and, as it appeared, a majority of both houses of congress have favored the St. Lawrence development, but more than one-third of the senate, sufficient to block ratification of a treaty, has persistently opposed it. Specifically the senate vote, when a treaty was last submitted by President Roosevelt in 1934, was 46 for and 42 against. Of the opposition votes 28 came from states along the Atlantic seaboard, which fear the diversion of ships piling from their ports, and most of the remainder from the lower Mississippi valley, which would like to see its river become the major water access to the great middle-western interior.

If presented in the form of a treaty now it is likely that these same elements would combine to defeat the project. But if the job can be done by a concurrent resolution, passable by majority vote of both houses, the odds are strongly on the side of its accomplishment. The major obstacle in the latter case may be a senate filibuster, but it is doubtful whether this would hold in the face of the President's current contention that quick completion of the waterway is essential "both for American defense today, and for American economic defense after the war."

Changed Position

Whereas the administration in 1934 took the position that a treaty was necessary to accomplishment of the project, part of the opposition in the senate was premised on the contention that a treaty was unnecessary. Senator Robert F. Wagner, Democrat, New York, asserted even that the St. Lawrence power project could be carried out by agreement between New York state and the adjoining Canadian provinces of Ontario and Quebec without intervention by the federal governments on either side.

The position of administration lawyers now that the project can be consummated by legislative enactment is based on the boundary waters treaty between the United States and Canada, ratified in 1909.

Article 13 of this convention declares: "In all cases where special agreements between the high contracting parties hereto are preferred to the foregoing, such special agreements are understood and intended to include not only direct arrangements between the high contracting parties, but also any mutual agreements between the United States and the Dominion of Canada expressed by concurrent or reciprocal legislation or by agreement between the parliament of the Dominion."

Destroyer Precedent

The recent destroyer-naval base trade may be of precedent. If it was legal for the United States to acquire a slice of Newfoundland and to proceed to the development of this as a naval and air base, without even so much as submitting the issue to congress, the United States certainly should be able, with congressional consent, to enter upon a plan for development of the St. Lawrence for purposes of mutual national defense of the two countries.

Mr. Roosevelt made it clear that his advocacy of it this year is to be principally on the ground of "national defense." The power development it would provide, he argued, "is tremendously needed" to produce "aluminum and more aluminum for the airplane program," and it is equally essential from the standpoint of shipbuilding.

"The world's merchant tonnage," he said, "is diminishing at the rate of 100,000 tons a year," and "sea coast shipyards already are overtaxed. Shipyards on the Great Lakes, with access to the ocean, yet close to the sources of supply of labor, raw and finished materials, further removed from possible attack, may be the vital factor in defense of this continent. They will help to build the ships which will bring back commerce to the harbors of the Atlantic coast ports."

done to the helpless Jews, and is now doing to countless non-Jews wherever his hand holds sway, I see a possible—indeed, a probable—future for all mankind which must make war seem like happy days. It takes little thought to realize that such a combine as Hitler's, once it has made sure of its hold upon all the earth, will not hesitate to intensify its slavery over every people to such degree as nobody can now imagine. For what would there be to stop it? What would there be to give pause to the whip of the slave drivers, except the mounting suicide rate, which would reduce the number of slaves?

Without the slightest doubt, such universal slavery would cause more than a hundredfold more persons to end their own miserable lives through suicide than would lose their lives in seeing to it that the present struggle of freedom shall be victorious. Also, universal slavery means an earth filled with crippled personalities—broken hearts, blighted souls—men who see no hope.

Truly, we must choose between two immense evils; and of these, slavery is immeasurably the more immense and the more hopeless of the two.

"All we shall know, if freedom dies, is that our chains are strong, and that each day is like a year, a year whose days are long."

Norwood, Va.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

NOTES ON HATS, SLAVERY, MR. LINCOLN On cleaning out the pockets of a suit preparatory to its going to the cleaners, I came across an article torn from an Austin newspaper concerning Mrs. Martha Jordan Mullen, of that city, who was 100 years old on December 8. On her birthday she sat primly in a wheel chair, wearing a gay silk dress to which was pinned an orchid, the gift of her nurse. Her hair was crimped by her own hands, as it always has been. The dress was of her own making. The orchid was described as entirely unnecessary luster. Mrs. Mullen possessed her own luster. Six weeks before her birthday, Mrs. Mullen broke her hip. She walks again now but uses the wheel chair a part of the time. At 98 she remained for three weeks under an oxygen tent defeating a severe case of pneumonia.

Mrs. Mullen owned 15 slaves when she was 12, saw Abraham Lincoln when she was 21, and has seen a rather large slice of life move on toward its ultimate goal.

She isn't exactly concerned about wars and rumors of war, except to believe they all are bad. She likes to recall that, when the slaves were willed to her, this was at her family home in Maryland; there was a proviso they each be freed within one year and given some furniture and other goods on being freed.

"So you see," she confides, "it wasn't just Mr. Lincoln who freed the slaves. I remember when I saw him, when his train was routed around Baltimore because they thought he might be assassinated. I couldn't for the life of me understand how he'd make a good president. He was the homeliest man I ever saw."

A great many persons thought that about the tall, gaunt man who was railroaded around Baltimore on his way to his inauguration. There was a plot to kill him and it might have succeeded had not such elaborate plans been made to thwart it.

THE MATTER OF A HAT

Mrs. Mullen's grandchildren believe their grandmother has one distinction which is unmatched. Throughout all her 100 years she has worn bonnets, never a hat.

"Once I put a hat on," she recalls, "and Will (her husband who died at 85) said to me, 'Where did you get that thing?' I said, 'I made it.' And he told me, 'Well, you can unmake it.' And I did."

Hats do not concern me. I rather like them. What does concern me is that husbands and their wishes meant something in the days gone by. Here is a husband who did not like a hat which his wife has made with her own hands. He does not daily or mince words. He does not go to the question in a diplomatic manner. What does he do? He says, "Unmake it." What does she do? She unmakes it.

The modern husband does not like feminine hats. He hoots at them. He laughs at them. He complains about them. He does not like the price. Nor does he like the shape, color or size.

This gets him nothing except hostile glares and short words. It gets him sarcasm and, on occasion, the hat is flung in his face. Literally or figuratively.

Then he gets the bill. He pays it.

The modern breed of husband has softened up.

Mr. Will Mullen could say, "Well, you can unmake it." That was enough. If the modern husband, whose wife does not make her hats, says, "Well, you can take it back!" it gets him nothing. Unless it be the horse laugh.

At any rate, I enjoyed reading about Mrs. Mullen. She obeyed her husband, and she has lived to be 100 years old and still is a charming, delightful and energetic person who can survive pneumonia and broken hips at the age of 98 and 99. One may wish her many more years of happiness and life. There might be an object lesson in her story. When Will commanded, she obeyed. Even in so serious a matter as hats.

MISS MITCHELL'S FAULT

It so happens I like the present-day hats which women wear. I do not think they are cute or pretty. They are amazing. And anything amazing is interesting. They are much more fascinating than pretty or attractive hats.

It is my idea that Miss Margaret Mitchell and her "Gone With the Wind" are responsible for the current pleasant insanity in hats. The hats are just exactly like those which Katie Scarlett O'Hara wore back in those lush days when all was well at Tara and the barbecue (not Bar-B-Q, mind you) was cooking at the Wilkes' plantation of Twelve Oaks.

The hats looked very well, indeed, on Miss Vivian Leigh, and especially well on Miss Olivia de Havilland. The other members of the cast wore them becomingly.

This started it. I am glad for Miss Mitchell's sake. Her magnificent book was more than a book. It was a phenomenon. It took the play in fashions away from Paris and wrought all sorts of influences on various persons. Some of them began to write furiously. If all the books "better than 'Gone With the Wind'" were placed end to end, publishers would be glad of it. They have received thousands. Others began to annoy Miss Mitchell in various ways and manners, mostly seeking to learn, through a 15-minute interview, how to write another such book.

But most of them paid the greater tribute of wearing clothes which were influenced in design by the book. This is especially true of the hats.

Most every day I see young ladies with hats perched, stuck, pinned or hanging on their heads which are designed right out of "Gone With the Wind."

It is all right with me. I like to look at them.

But, and I do not mean this unkindly, a very, very few of them manage to look like Miss Leigh or Miss De Havilland.

And that is a pity.

While the Feast Is on the Table

We Forget to Worry About Stomachache

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Every thinking man and woman in America is wondering uneasily what the future will offer in terms of bread and butter.

If history is a trustworthy criterion—and we have no other yardstick—the question is easily answered.

We all know that everything must be paid for. Both experience and common sense tell us we must reap what we sow. When the prodigal has spent his substance in riotous living, he must for a time eat husks with the swine. When a nation has spent its accumulated wealth and gone deeply into debt to prosecute a war, people must tighten their belts and live hard paying the new taxes and retiring the war debts and rebuilding what they wasted.

The World War of twenty-three years ago left the world bankrupt, and all nations were still suffering from its effects when the present war began.

This war, whether we share the fighting or only furnish the weapons, is likely to cost us twice as much as the last. And the fact that we have already burdened ourselves with a debt of over forty billions, before beginning the outlay for material adventures, will not only double our final burden but cut in half our capacity to endure it.

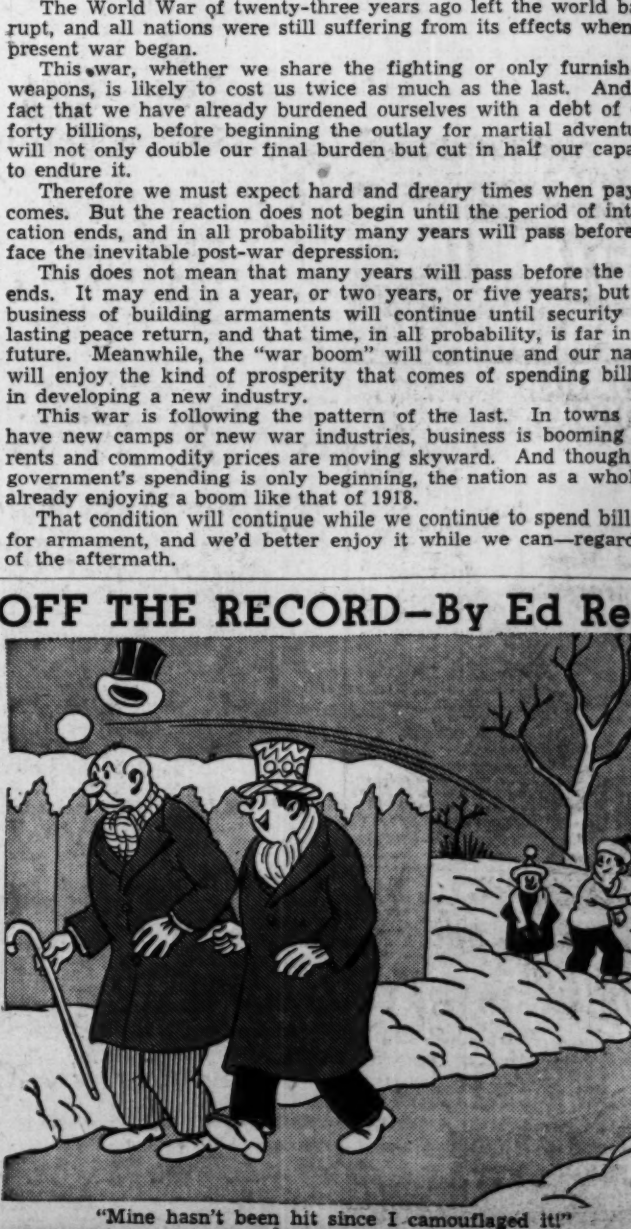

Therefore we must expect hard and dreary times when payday comes. But the reaction does not begin until the period of intoxication ends, and in all probability many years will pass before we face the inevitable post-war depression.

This does not mean that many years will pass before the war ends. It may end in a year, or two years, or five years; but the business of building armaments will continue until security and lasting peace return, and that time, in all probability, is far in the future. Meanwhile, the "war boom" will continue and our nation will enjoy the kind of prosperity that comes of spending billions in developing a new industry.

This war is following the pattern of the last. In towns that have new camps or new war industries, business is booming and rents and commodity prices are moving skyward. And though the government's spending is only beginning, the nation as a whole is already enjoying a boom like that of 1918.

That condition will continue while we continue to spend billions for armament, and we'd better enjoy it while we can—regardless of the aftermath.

About Cigaretts, Friendships and How Come

Man who shared my trolley seat said he tried to be at peace with all mankind, especially as the Yuletide approaches, but he never could get quite intimate with a boob who smoked any brand of cigarettes except (deleted by adv. dept.), because this indicated lack of sound judgment.

He has a right to his own opinion, of course, but I differ with him.

I am one of those unfortunate persons who always has a fresh pack of cigarettes. My shoes may be thin, my pants unpressed, the pantry down to the last half-loaf of bread and nary a drop of lick-er in the house, but I have cigarettes. As the Mistress of the Manor has more than once remarked:

"But I am not hidebound about my special brand. I do not insist that callers at my office or guests in my home smoke my brand. Indeed, I am happy upon discovering they stick to their own. And have brought them along."

And I trust none of my daily associates yield to the temptation to swear off cigarettes. Because their determination proves expensive to their friends.

"May I have one of your cigarettes?" one of these sufferers will inquire. "Actually, I've sworn off smoking, so I haven't any of my own. Thanks!"

So this poor martyr, determined he will not buy a pack of cigarettes because that would start him right back where he left off, goes around bumming smokes off his friends—or former friends. He is like a hungry pup wondering when you'll rise from the table and give him that big steak bone he's been smelling for the last hour.

But pretty soon he falls by the wayside, invests in a whole carton of cigarettes and begins making up for that misspent past. That's the time, if his associates are wise, when they descend upon him in a body. And within one afternoon his carton has melted away.

Crusade for Cabbage.

A woman reader who subscribes herself "Life Term Boarder," perhaps because she is ashamed to confess publicly her affection for a plebeian vegetable, writes me a prose ode to cabbage.

She complains she cannot find this "poor and muchly slighted relative of the upstart Brussels sprout and haughty cauliflower family in any Atlanta restaurant."

"I am a cabbage hunter," she declares, "and wander from place to place in search of my favorite food, but in vain."

"I want cabbage. I would like to set it to music and have it broadcast. Won't you join me in a movement for more cabbage at more eating places?"

It pains me deeply to refuse the request of even an anonymous correspondent. But I fear I could not do the subject justice, lacking the enthusiasm which a crusade demands.

But I am surprised she finds it necessary to ask a restaurant waiter whether cabbage is being served. One sniff of the atmosphere should tell her all.

I sing psalms of praise to gravy. I yearn for hours alone when I can indulge to the freest of my passion for onions. I can take turnip greens without protest. I can even eat cabbage when circumstances demand, such as there being nothing else available. But I can keep my cabbage craving under control. I do not wake up in the midnight hours crying aloud for cabbage.

But I am surprised to learn the restaurants do not serve it. Surely my correspondent has not made an exhaustive search. There are several restaurants in Atlanta which specialize on country food. Perhaps she should try again.

"There goes," remarked a big shot in a big business to me the other day, "a smart young chap I fired a couple of years ago. Look at him! Going somewhere in a red light. Intent on getting somewhere. And he will."

"Why did you fire him?" I asked. "If he's so hot," explained my acquaintance. "Ours is necessarily a conservative outfit."

"This young fellow had more ideas than a hound has fleas. Most of them bad. I'd say about 70 per cent."

"What about the remaining 30 per cent, if my mathematics is working?" I asked. "Couldn't you use them. If I could hit a batting average like that . . ."

"They demanded too much work—and expense," said the big shot. "They disrupted the whole staff. He thought 'em up, worked out the details and laid 'em on my lap. But he didn't have time to finish the job. He always had a new idea he wanted to work out."

"To be downright honest, I confess I didn't want to start something which would make me work after my hours—which are from 10 to 4, with two hours out for lunch. And interfere with my golf. Heck, we're doing all right."

"So, I did this young go-getter a favor. I fired him—abruptly."

And he landed himself with a go-getting outfit which can use him. "I'm glad you wish him success," said I.

"You bet I do," said he. "I'm thinking maybe I'll have to ask him for a job some day."

Galax Leaves

"I know somp'n you don't know," was one of the favorite expressions of childhood days. Like "trade last."

I know somp'n I hope not too many folk know. A spot within 20 miles of Five Points where galax leaves may be found in abundance. And on "nobody's land," or at least, upon a tract not posted against trespassers.

Galax leaves are like holly—a Christmastide decoration. They are born green and turn crimson. And they last a long time.

There's a little town—or just a railroad stop—up in North Carolina or Virginia—somewhere on the Southern Railway—called Galax. The inhabitants earn most of their money gathering and shipping galax leaves—compressed into bales. I shudder to think what a few dozen would cost at a Park Avenue florist's in New York.

Anyway, I know where to gather bushels of them. But I'm not telling.

You can pick up many bargains by picking up and reading the Want Ad pages of The Constitution.

300 Newsboys To Go on Frolic Christmas Eve

Turkey Dinner, Floor Show and Gifts on Program.

Approximately 300 newsboys on the two Atlanta dailies will be entertained at the annual frolic staged by a group of business and professional men and scheduled this year for 7 o'clock Christmas Eve at the Henry Grady hotel.

The event has been held annually since 1915, and each year has been in charge of Phil C. McDuffie, who is assisted by leading citizens and businessmen. Program for this year includes a turkey dinner, a floor show and the presenting of gifts to the newsboys.

Comedies Top Pre-Christmas Film Offerings

Movie Patron Can Choose From Variety of Entertainment.

By LEE ROGERS.
Motion Picture Editor.

Fast comedy, both domesticated and sophisticated, dominates the pre-Christmas week of film offerings which begin in Peachtree street's theaters today. A western, with a drawing room habitant as the hero, and two holdovers complete the offering.

"No Time for Comedy," with James Stewart and Rosalind Russell in the roles played on the stage here last summer by Katharine Cornell and Francis Lederer, opens today at the Fox. "Blondie Plays Cupid" is the laugh offering at the Rialto.

"Trail of the Vigilantes," with Franchot Tone as a western hero, has already begun its run at the Paramount theater, a film which trade publications say is good. "The Letter," one of the outstanding films of the year, has been held over for another three days by the Capitol and "Gone With the Wind" is still in its anniversary run at Loew's Grand.

Fox

Its lines cleaned up a bit, but with none of the fast dialogue lost, or the amusing situations discarded, "No Time for Comedy" comes to the Fox theater today for a run through Christmas Eve. Rosalind Russell and James Stewart star. The story concerns itself with the life of a backwoods boy who happens to write a sophisticated drawing room comedy which by some chance is accepted for production with the greatest actress on Broadway at the time, played by Miss Russell, scheduled to take the leading role.

There is quite a shock to all concerned with the playwright finally making his appearance after detouring by the Grand Canyon since the railroad had such a wonderful excursion to offer. But, Miss Russell marries the guy and then nurses him through four straight successes until the serious illness starts. One of the rich Wall street brokers' wives takes a fancy to the young playwright and tries to "inspire"—all with humorous and disastrous results.

Rialto

"Blondie Plays Cupid," most recent of the Blondie series, comes to the Rialto theater today for an engagement of six days. Columbia's super production, "Arizona," begins Christmas Day.

Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake and Larry Simms once again bring to life on the screen the characters of Blondie, Dagwood and Baby Dumping Bumstead, made famous by the comic strip drawn by Chic Young.

This time, attempting to aid a young eloping couple, Dagwood gets into serious trouble with the girl's father and only his famous "one-tow" punch saves him—for the time being. Then Baby Dumping gets caught on the ridgepole of a house and there are moments when it looks like his finish.

And there is the discovery of an oil well and lots of other complications which, in the usual lucky way for the Bumsteads, finally work out a happy ending.

Paramount

Smooth Franchot Tone returns to the films in a rough-and-tumble role of a cowboy in the Paramount offering of "The Trail of the Vigilantes."

The story is humorous, filled with action and packed with plenty of suspense, the advance agent tells us. "The Vigilantes" on the loose again and have taken the law into their own hands—so the west might live.

The cast is filled with many good actors, including Warren

"YOUNG IDEAS IN MUSIC"—Ben Young and his aggregation of young Texans with musical talent are opening tomorrow night at the Rainbow Room of the Ansley hotel. The band plays under the catchline, "Young Ideas in Music," and presents such. Ben and the boys and girls will be the New Year's Eve entertainers at the Rainbow Room, too. He is shown here with his featured vocalist, Ginny Braynard.

Williams, Broderick Crawford, Andy Devine, Mischa Auer and Peggy Moran.

Loew's

"Gone With the Wind," the outstanding motion picture of modern times, is continuing its anniversary premiere run at the Loew's Grand theater with three shows daily.

A continuous performance beginning at 9 o'clock and running through about 6 is given daily except Sunday. Night performances are reserved seat affairs and begin at 8 o'clock.

Manager Eddie Pentecost emphasizes that the film has not been cut and is presented exactly in the same form as it was at advanced prices last December.

Rhodes

"Little Nellie Kelly," with Judy Garland playing her first grown-up romance opposite George Murphy, has been held over at the Rhodes theater for another run through Monday. It's a musical with Judy singing.

Also in the cast of this Irish New York picture are Charles Winninger and Douglas McPhail. Judy plays a dual role, that of Murphy's wife and then his daughter.

Capitol

"The Letter," starring Bette Davis, which for the past seven days has been presented at the Fox theater to large crowds despite the Christmas shopping period, has been held over for three additional days and is offered today through Saturday at the Capitol.

"The Letter," pronounced by newspaper critics and audiences alike to be the finest of all Miss Davis' pictures, is based on W. Somerset Maugham's most brilliant stage drama, originally presented on Broadway with Katherine Cornell in the starring role.

It is the story of a woman who murders for love, and the consequences she suffers, even though the law acquits her.

Cameo

Don "Red" Barry, the young man who has made such a phenomenally rapid rise in the action western field, demonstrates again his acting ability, in his latest film, "Texas Terrors," which will be shown at the Cameo theater tomorrow and Saturday for its first showing in Atlanta. Also on the program will be "The Sky Giant," with Richard Dix and Chester Morris.

County Group To Study Applications for Raises

Applications for salary increases will occupy the attention of the Fulton county commission when it meets in special session at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to set the salary schedule of all employees for 1941.

Numbers of applications for raises have been filed, but no blanket increases are expected to be approved. Under state law, salaries must be set 10 days prior to the beginning of the new year.

Good Morning

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

Dr. William S. Goldsmith writes from Daytona Beach about the perfectly grand time he and Mrs. Goldsmith are having in that Florida sunshine. Think of being in position to spend four months in Florida with nothing to do but fish and eat and sleep. It must be fine.

"The principal occupation here seems to be sitting. My wife says she sees very few people working—just sitting around. The greatest activity one notices down here is when the dinner bell rings.

"By the way, we have taken an apartment for the winter, right at the water's edge, and we have a Wilkes county Negro as janitor in this building. I have lots of fun with him. We just received a package of sausage and a two-year-old ham from Georgia. When the aroma of that ham permeates the apartment my northern neighbors break into tears.

"We enjoy the grand things to eat down here—fresh strawberries, shrimp, oysters, crabs, every sort of fish, fresh and salt water, and fruit beyond description. And along with all these wonderful items of food should be added honey and bread.

"I have struck up a delightful fellowship with a group of about 10 men from widely scattered parts of the country—only two of us being from the south—and we do have the finest time together, talking, fishing, etc.

"Enjoy listening to the services from your church every Sunday, as broadcast over WGST. Last Sunday (December 15) I was coming out of the surf from my morning swim, and passing a car parked between the water and our apartment, I heard your voice, and stood there in the glorious sunshine and listened to you preaching on 'I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me.' The people asked me to have a seat in their car, but I was dripping wet, and asked to be allowed to stand beside their car and listen. Keep on preaching about Jesus, brother."

It must be fine, I repeat, to be in position to spend the winter in a place like that. And how grateful I am that a man like Dr. Goldsmith, with his good wife, can enjoy such a place of rest and relaxation. He has given his long life to the ministry of medicine. Thousands who read this column today will join with me in thanking that this noble physician can have these days of rest in God's beautiful Florida sunshine with the mighty sea, the majestic trees, the lovely flowers, the abundance of fruit and fish, and all that composes that scene of pleasantness. It may well seem to point our thoughts to the blessed day when all the redeemed of the Lord shall be together, and with Him, in the land that is fairer than day. Selah.

TRADE TURKEY TROT.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Dec. 18.—The first 10 of 40 turkeys to be turned loose this week were released yesterday on Broad street. Dropping them from a second-story window and letting the crowd scramble for them was part of a Yule trade promotion stunt put on by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. The others of the 40 will be released this week.

ADVERTISING CLUB PRESIDENT—Chess Lagomarsino Jr., left, advertising manager of Davison-Paxon's yesterday was elected president of the Atlanta Advertising Club. With him is John McDonald, retiring president. At the meeting the club decided to adopt a program to acquaint the public with the truth about advertising.

Drive Planned To Tell Public Of Advertising

Chess Lagomarsino Is Elected President by Atlanta Club.

Plans for a campaign to acquaint consumers with the truth about advertising were discussed and adopted yesterday at the Atlanta Advertising Club's Christmas luncheon and meeting that also featured election of officers for the coming year.

E. V. Hungerford, who proposed the nominations, reminded members of their successful campaign for truth in advertising but told them that the consuming public knew next to nothing of advertising's method and functions.

Chess Lagomarsino was elected president, succeeding John McDonald. Other officers named were Frank Rowsey, Lewis Gordon and James Stafford, vice presidents; Dick Brumby, treasurer; Guss

Jones, secretary, and Gordon Donaldson, sergeant-at-arms. Board of directors, including new and carry-over members, is composed of Neil Gallagher, John K. Ottley Jr., Fred Storey, Jess Roberts, Mrs. James Fuller, John McDonald, Dan Shirey, Mrs. Elizabeth McCarthy, E. V. Hungerford, J. R. Brumby, Hunter Bell and Bruce Moran.

Santa Claus Criticizes Method Used by Parents

KANSAS CITY, Dec. 18.—(P)—Parents, a department store complains, use the wrong psychological approach when their children visit St. Nick.

Lew Ayres, a professional clown serving his 17th season as a Santa, sighed:

"They're always making the kids scared by saying 'Now don't be afraid of Santa. Santa won't hurt you.'"

"But when I get the kid alone I can always win him over. I talk soft to him and use endearing charms. A child loves flattery."

The man who can lay a roof without "laying down" on the job is advertising in the Business Service column in the Want Ad pages of The Constitution.

Singing Redcap Will Be Heard Here Thursday

Atlanta-Born and Educated Artist Under $100,000 Contract.

A walking success story, exactly $100,000 of him—the kind you read about and say, "Aw, shucks, that ain't so!" but which is so—is going to give a concert Thursday night at the First Congregational church, Houston and Courtland streets.

He is the "Singing Redcap," Parker Watkins, an Atlanta-born and educated artist, who is making his hometown debut after crashing the first pages and the doors of booking agents by singing Christmas carols in New York's Pennsylvania station.

"A year ago," as the Rev. John Clarence Wright, pastor of the church recounts, "unemployed and broke, he wandered into the station where Christmas music was being played on the organ. He joined in the singing.

"So extraordinary was his voice that the organist invited him to come forward. He sang alone, and also directed the huge crowds of travelers in mass singing of the carols. Newspapers and magazines gave him much publicity and he was dubbed 'Railroad Station Troubadour' and 'Singing Redcap.' Now he is under contract for $100,000."

Come right on, Mr. Alger—what've you got to offer to match that one?

Phi Beta Kappa To Pay Tribute To Dr. Boland

Atlanta Surgeon Will Be Given Diploma and Citation Tonight.

Dr. Frank K. Boland, Atlanta surgeon, will be honored tonight at the first meeting in New York of the Phi Beta Kappa Associates by election as one of the 70 founders. He will be given a diploma and citation. Numerous other nationally known figures will receive similar recognition.

Text of Dr. Boland's citation will read:

"Noted practitioner of surgery, skilled at imparting the technique of his profession, he has not only raised high the torch of surgical practice, but has done much to hand that torch on into worthy hands.

"In St. Joseph's hospital, Baltimore, and in Emory University hospital, he has given generously of his skill to multitudes of charity patients, and at Emory University he has for ten years been a professor of surgery.

"During the World War he served in France at the base hospital at Blois as lieutenant colonel in the medical corps. Member of leading American and international organizations of physicians and surgeons, chairman of the Atlanta Chapter of the American Red Cross, he comes to Phi Beta Kappa Associates as a founding member."

Dr. Boland, who lives at 252 Peachtree circle, was graduated from the University of Georgia in 1893 and from the medical school of Emory in 1897.

Officers of the organization, who will receive similar honors are: Arthur T. Vanderbilt, former president of the American Bar Association, president; Julius H. Barnes, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Hugh McK. Landon, prominent banker of Indianapolis, and Dave Hennen Morris, former ambassador to Belgium, vice president; Dr. Joseph E. Goodbar, attorney and also author of important works on money and HONORED—Dr. Frank K. Boland, Emory surgeon and educator, who will be made a founder of Phi Beta Kappa Associates in New York tonight.

Auto Insurance Rates Reduced 30 Per Cent

Georgia Cost Scale Declared Lower Than in Nearby States.

Answering a request sent November 26 by Lon Sullivan, head of the state patrol, the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters supplied figures made public yesterday showing Georgia's average liability insurance rates on automobiles have been reduced more than 30 per cent since 1936.

The specific reduction was from $29.39 in 1936 to $19.46 in 1939. Existing Georgia rates were declared to be lower than those in effect in Alabama, Tennessee and the Carolinas.

Cost of accidents, including wage losses, repairs, medical attention and funeral expenses, has been lowered in four years from $45,000,000 annually in Georgia to $32,500,000, Sullivan said.

Launching a drive to prevent death of 83 Georgians this month, as in 1939, Sullivan observed: "Saving human lives by preventing fatal accidents is also saving Georgia citizens cash money."

City of Flint Captain To Get Naval Cross

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The navy will award Captain Joseph A. Gainard, Melrose, Mass., the Naval Cross tomorrow for his exploit in bringing the S. S. City of Flint safely back to the United States after its capture by a German naval vessel.

Representative Rogers, Republican, Massachusetts, author of a bill to award Gainard a congressional medal, said the presentation originally was to have been made by Secretary Knox, but that he might be out of the city, necessitating presentation by some other high naval official.

Gainard managed to slip away from a convoying German warship after his vessel's capture in the early days of the war.

Snow and Rain Spread Over Western States

Stormy Conditions Reach as Far South as Arkansas.

Slowly rising temperatures, accompanied by snow and rain, spread over the west yesterday as a low pressure area moved inland from the Pacific ocean.

Stormy conditions prevailed as far eastward as Montana in the north and touched Oklahoma and Arkansas in the south. Rain fell along the Pacific coast and in the southern interior, while below-freezing temperatures turned the precipitation to snow farther north. Light snows also fell in northwestern New York and northeastern Maine.

Temperatures in New England dropped far below freezing, but in the south the mercury climbed rapidly after a cold night and warmer weather was forecast. Readings were as much as 15 degrees above the previous day in some middlewestern states.

British Road Accidents Rival Raid Deaths

LONDON, Dec. 18.—(AP)—British highway accidents are killing one-fourth as many persons as air raids, it was officially disclosed today.

Frederick Montague, parliamentary secretary of the transportation ministry, said 1,146 died in motor accidents last month, as compared with 4,588 dead in air raids.

A little more than half the total of November victims were killed during air-raid blackouts. In 15 months of war, Montague said, 11,424 persons have been killed on roads, an increase of 3,141 over the 15 months preceding the war.

Amish Family Member Enlists in U. S. Army

LANCASTER, Pa., Dec. 18.—(AP)—A member of an Amish family and as such traditionally exempt from military service, Amos King Fisher, 21, enlisted in the United States army today and indicated he hoped to make a career of active military service.

Local historians said it was the first such case on record. The sect is rigidly opposed to war. Young Fisher formally broke away from the sect five years ago.

Mrs. J. K. Ohl's Grandchild Dies

Joan Scott Webster, 11, granddaughter of Mrs. J. K. Ohl, who with her husband was once prominent in newspaper work in Atlanta, was hit and instantly killed by an automobile December 6 when playing in the street near her home in Westchester county, New York, according to word received here yesterday.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Frank Webster. Mrs. Webster was formerly Joan Ohl. Her father, the late J. K. Ohl, was at one time a star reporter on The Constitution. He left Atlanta to go with James Gordon Bennett on the New York Herald, and was that paper's foreign correspondent in China and later in Paris. Mrs. Ohl was also outstanding in journalism, heading the first woman's department on any southern newspaper.

The death of Joan was reported in a letter from Mrs. Ohl to James Alexander, vice president of the First National Bank, long a friend of the Ohl family.

Joan is survived by her parents and three brothers, Frank Webster, David Kenyon Webster and J. K. Ohl Webster.

Police Dog Drunk, Is Placed in Cell

BROCKTON, Mass., Dec. 18.—(AP)—A good-natured police dog, which took "one too many," wound up in a police cell today to "sober off" after giving an uncanine-like exhibition on Main street that puzzled even the dog officer.

Shoppers were amazed to see the big animal leap in the air and then roll over on his back. When Dog Officer Frank McKay reached the scene, he noticed the dog's eyes were dilated.

"Give me you paw, old boy," said McKay. The dog tried to comply but fell on his face.

The source of the jag was some window cleaning fluid, containing denatured alcohol, which had spilled into the street near where window washers were at work.

Dolores del Rio Files Divorce Suit

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Black-haired Dolores Del Rio filed a divorce suit today against Cedric Gibbons, movie art director, charging mental cruelty.

They married August 6, 1930, at Santa Barbara, Cal.

The Mexican actress has been inactive on the screen for several years.

Since her separation, the slim brunette has been seen frequently in the company of Actor-Producer Orson Welles. He was divorced last February by Virginia Nicolson Welles.

Miss Del Rio's first husband was Jaime Del Rio, who died in 1928. She is 35 and her real name is Lolita Dolores Asunsolo de Martinez.

Hall Will Head Rail Presidents

R. B. Pegram, vice president of the Southern Railway system, said yesterday he had been informed that Fitzgerald Hall, of Nashville, Tenn., had been elected chairman of the Southeastern Railroad Presidents' conference.

Hall is president of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad. As chairman of the conference, he succeeds E. E. Norris, president of the Southern Railway.

Hall's election took place at a meeting held in New York Tuesday and Pegram said he learned of the election yesterday by telephone.

Whether you have a few suitcases or many items of furniture to be moved you can find somebody for the job by turning to Classification 84—"Moving and Storage."

Did Your Christmas Budget Balance? . . .

Was there enough in the savings account this year to meet the Christmas bills when they are due January 1?

Do you plan your family expenditures so as to make the family income do the best possible job?

Do you run your family on a budget?

If not, you are overlooking one of the best opportunities to promote harmonious family life, and passing up a chance to reap the economic benefits that come from planning family expenditures within the family income.

Our Service Bureau at Washington has ready for you a booklet, "Budgeting Household Accounts," designed to be helpful in planning the family budget and running the family finances throughout the year, so as to get a hundred cents worth from every dollar, and make every dollar fit into its assigned place.

No complicated bookkeeping is involved. The rules are simple; the budget plans suggested fit various sizes of income.

Start the New Year of 1941 right by planning your family expenditures. Send the coupon below for your copy of "Budgeting."

Paroled Burglar Pleads Guilty to Six Charges

Willie Veal, a Negro, just doesn't seem to be able to keep out of trouble.

Paroled in May from a 12-to-15-year sentence on a charge of burglary, Veal yesterday pleaded guilty to six charges involving burglary, larceny and carrying a pistol without a license and was sentenced to serve from 10 to 20 years.

The two larceny charges involved theft of clothing and jewelry from two Georgia Tech fraternity houses—Chi Phi and Phi Sigma Kappa.

NICKEL A WEEK—That is what these employees of the Southern Freight Tariff Bureau give to support one of the city's neediest families. Each contributes five cents and it totals $240 a year. They have "adopted" Opportunity No. 8 this Christmas, giving a wonderful break to a sick man. This proves small donations can do a big job.

Two Families Are 'Adopted' By Atlantans

M. $25 each month to supplement her small earnings while she works at a laundry and goes to school to learn more.

Thus two Opportunity families are assured of a chance during the next 12 months—but many more needy, deserving families are still left wondering if they will get a break—if they will be cold and hungry in 1941, or if they will be assisted in their battle for independence. Can't you help keep these people from suffering so much? Contribute a little! Every bit counts.

The Constitution and the Family Welfare Society, which co-operate in presenting Atlanta's neediest families each Christmas, extend thanks to the officers and members of the Service Guild and to the men and women who work at the Southern Freight Tariff Bureau. They have made a real contribution to the welfare of the city as well as making Christmas a happy one for two poor families.

Work of Guild. The Service Guild was started in 1936 for social service in the city, and its activities have been wide.

It conducts six obstetrical and gynecological clinics at Grady hospital, and 40 of its members take active part in this work. The members work also at the Family Welfare Society, on the switchboard and doing stenographic work. It maintains a nursery school, with a professional teacher, at the Jewish Educational Alliance. Members volunteer to assist.

The Service Guild also participates in the Community Fund campaign, the Red Cross drive and other civic work. When it started it had 16 members. Now the membership totals 125.

Group's Leaders.

Officers of this group are Mrs. Sam Hirsch, president; Mrs. O. R. Strauss Jr. and Mrs. George Kohn Jr., vice presidents; Mrs. Joseph Asher and Mrs. L. C. Long, secretaries, and Mrs. L. B. Joel, treasurer. Mrs. Leon Froshin, member of the Service Guild, was active in including the Opportunity families in the broad program of the group.

Cheerful givers are the employees at the tariff bureau. For half a dozen years they have chipped in the nickel a week each that has totaled enough to give real help to the city's neediest. Over the period of years, they have given more than $1,500—and are pledging $240 more for 1941! Their money has helped rehabilitate nearly a dozen families.

R. W. Sparks is "sort of" spokesman for these workers. "We want to 'adopt' Mr. J., who has an ulcerated stomach," he said. "I spent $40 once finding out I didn't have one!"

So, the sympathy of these working men and women for a man too sick to work assures Mr. J. of a chance to work again!

That's real giving at Christmas time!

Join the parade, Atlantans. Send a donation to the Ten Opportunity Fund. Direct it to H. H. Trotti, vice president and business manager of The Constitution, who is treasurer. Every cent you give goes to help the family you designate. Hurry!

Livestock Sale Slated In Athens This Afternoon

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 18.—A carload of 30 head of cattle—about equally divided between yearling bulls and two-year-old Hereford heifers—will be sold here Thursday.

The sale will be held at Hardman Hall on the university campus beginning at 1 o'clock (E. S. T.), according to D. L. Branyon, Clarke county agricultural extension agent.

To fill an empty house, rent an empty room, telephone WA. 6565.

Opportunities 13 and 14 Are Worthy Causes small donation, if that is all you can afford. But anyway, HELP!

Opportunity 14

Tragedy never rains, it pours. There has been an eternal storm of it about the thin shoulders of 19-year-old Alice E. ever since she can remember, almost.

She is your Christmas Opportunity No. 14, and if there is any sympathy in your heart this Christmas, she will be helped!

The E. family is a big one. Mr. E. is 80 years old and his wife is 58. Bill, the oldest son, is 26. Tom is 22, Jerry is 15, Frances is 14 and Mary is 11. Eight mouths to feed.

Mr. E. fell from a ladder on which he was working four years ago. He has not been able to work since. Mrs. E. has recently undergone a serious operation and is not recovering as rapidly as she should. She is still in bed.

There is tragedy enough, Atlantans, but that isn't all. Alice is the one you are asked to help. She is bed-ridden now, wasting away. Her brothers try desperately hard to supply the things she needs to get well—but somehow they just can't make enough to feed all those mouths and provide a special diet and medicine for Alice. They have tried with all their might. Milk and eggs in abundance for one single frail girl are too expensive. The kind of nourishing foods she must have are beyond their pocket books.

But is $15 a month too much for you? That is all she needs to have a chance to get well, be healthy, work, or get married. These few dollars could work miracles—if Atlantans give them this Christmas. Give her a month of good food! Maybe 11 other Atlantans will give the same!

Fire Destroys Barn, Church of Candler Youth

Bishop and Others Went to Sunday School There Years Ago.

By F. T. WILSON.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. VILLA RICA, Ga., Dec. 18.—A large barn at Old Town, belonging to Mrs. Sam Haynes, burned last night.

There may not be much news in that simple statement, but when it is revealed the building was formerly the church in which Bishop Warren A. Candler, the late Asa Candler and Will Candler, and Judge John S. Candler attended Sunday school as youths, it brings back memories that made it a real landmark in this section.

The Candler boys' father, Samuel C. Candler, who also was the grandfather of Samuel C. Dobbs, Atlanta capitalist, was a prime factor in the building of the church, along with Dr. J. T. Slaughter. The church served the community which was growing up around the gold mining industry, then the chief occupation here.

The mother of the boys collected pennies which paid for the bell which called the people to worship each Sunday, and the bell is now serving at the Methodist Orphans' Home in Decatur.

Thus, from this church, later used as a common barn, much of the inspiration for the magnificent gifts to Emory University, to LaGrange College and other schools, may have been born in the hearts of its members, the Bishop Candler received much of Candler and the Dobbses. Perhaps his early religion within its walls.

CHRISTMAS and BILL MONEY IN ONE WELL-PLANNED LOAN

You people who are now owing money on bills and who have thought that you could not afford to borrow money for Christmas needs will welcome this plan. It shows you how you can get all the money you need NOW for both purposes, and repay on easy, simple terms.

If you need money it will be well worth while to read this through—

HOW MUCH MONEY IS NEEDED?

Well, let's take an average amount of money owed by the average person, and a reasonable amount he will want for Christmas needs. Your needs will, of course, be different. Here is a simple way of comparing them—

A person needs $80 for Christmas. He has 14 debts, and the total of the amount he needs for everything is $325.

Christmas needs	$80.00
1 Doctor's bill	50.00
2 Department and clothing store bills	45.00
3 Dentist's bill	25.00
4 Tax or rent payments	45.00
1 Insurance payment	75.00
1 Car repair and gas bills	15.00
4 Miscellaneous bills	35.00
Total	$325.00

"He makes $155 a month and he and his family live on about $130 of that money; that leaves only $25 a month to apply to back bills. Now those 14 creditors are naturally after his money. Then, too, here's Christmas coming up. So, with the worry of back bills and the prospect for a lean holiday season—here's pretty much down in the dumps. What's the best thing for him to do?"

GET ONE LOAN OF $325
One simple, easy loan from The Industrial Loan and Security Company will pay up back bills and provide the money for a cash Christmas.

YOU CAN GET THE MONEY YOU NEED
There is no delay. You'll get one-day service all through the season prior to Christmas. You can get your money on just your personal note or on most any article that has a reasonable value. All loans are made in strict confidence and complete privacy, with every courtesy. Interest is at legal rates, and you may have long or short terms. For a Merrier Christmas get A CASH CHRISTMAS! SAYS

Santa To Command Scene At Ryman Party Tonight

WHEN THE GUESTS enter the great glass doors of the Capital City Club's Mirador Room this evening for Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Ryman's party for debutante Evelyn Harrison, they will find Santa Claus in command of the situation. Old Saint Nick will be perched atop a huge snowball in the center of the semi-circular table where the 60 guests will be seated, and what a scene he will survey! Mrs. Ryman, whose touch is magic when it comes to party decorations, has spared no pains to make it gay and charming, and you can depend upon it that the picture will be one of entrancing beauty!

Sharing honors with Evelyn, who is the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julian Harrison, will be her guest, lovely Betty Bunker, of San Francisco, who arrived yesterday from Pine Manor at Wellesley, Mass., where she was Evelyn's roommate last year. Betty is en route to California to spend Christmas with her parents, and she will take a plane on Saturday to complete her journey. Betty's father is one of the leading lumbermen on the Pacific coast, and when Evelyn visited her last summer, the two girls had a grand trip to Canada on one of his boats.

But to get back to Mrs. Ryman's lavish decorations, she has chosen for her table a cloth of shimmering red metal foil, with a white satin drop falling to the floor. Extending the entire length of the table through the center of the crimson cloth will be graceful runners of white cedar, starred with clusters of silver and red cellophane bells. Arising at intervals from the feathery white foliage will be star-shaped silver candelabra holding tall white tapers. Mrs. Ryman will bank the base of her jolly Santa Claus figure with holly, white cedar and red cellophane bells, and you can easily envision the entrancing effect she will produce.

For placecards she has chosen quaint old-fashioned figures, which are both clever and amusing. For instance, a card with a pair of lovers sitting in a buggy bears the inscription, "This is where you park." A Victorian lady on a bicycle admonishes you to "Sit here and like it." Still another says, "Put on the feed bag," and so on.

Invited to meet Evelyn and Betty are Martha Merritt, Margaret Winship, Mary Lib Beers, Helen McDuffie, Caroline McCleskey, Emmelyn Carter, Joy O'Brien, Caroline Yundt, Isabel Vretnan, Jean Pentecost, Elsa McCall, Helen Diggs, of Washington; Betty Black, of New York; Margaret Thomason, Rawson Haverly, Julian Harrison Jr., James Newton, Ed Carter Jr., Bill Cram III, Dr. Harry Crosswell, Newton Craig, Bill Manry III, Clem Powers Jr., Wharton Mitchell, Dean Sprattlin, Crosswell Smith, of New York; Jack Chambers, Forrest Adair Jr., Guy Woolford Jr., Walter McCord, Bob Powers, Sam Dorsey, George McDuffie, Dan Franklin, Langdon Quin, Jimmy Sibley, Clifford Trichler, Walter James Jr., Elbert Tuttle Jr., Price Gilbert, Tommy Cauthorn, Bob Crawford, Alex Hitz Jr., Ray Moore and Frank Smith.

A group of their married friends will assist the hosts in entertaining, the group including Evelyn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Harrison; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strickland, Mr. and Mrs. Clement Evans, Mr. and Mrs.

Lawrence Willet, and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Williams.

THAT POPULAR bridal couple, Anne Bolling Graham, of Rome, and Hughes Spalding Jr., shared the spotlight at the Mirador Room last evening at the elaborate dinner party given by Arthur Howell Jr. Arthur, you know, is a Princeton graduate, and now attends Harvard Law School. But he returned to Atlanta Tuesday to spend the holidays with his mother, Mrs. G. Arthur Howell, and also to serve as a groomsman for Hughes at his marriage on Saturday.

The guests at last evening's party included members of the wedding party and the following from Rome, who motored here for the affair: Mary Lee Sullivan, Nancy Cooper and her fiancé, Henry Berry; Graham Wright, Myra Gilmore, Ellen Edmondson, Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Hackett, Mr. and Mrs. Sid Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hunter, Meredith Graham, Williamson Smith Jr., Gordon L. Sullivan, and Jane T. Smith, of Mobile, who is a bridesmaid and is visiting Anne in Rome.

The guests, numbering 85, were seated at one large table placed around the outer edge of the ballroom. The decorative motif featured a green and white color scheme, achieved with quantities of white roses, valley lilies, snapdragons, carnations and gardenias arranged in plateau effect down the center of the table. Rich foliage was used with the white flowers and garlands of smilax festooned the table.

PEGGY DUTTON is in a dither! When she sent out invitations to the open house at which she and her brother Bud will entertain on Christmas Day, she put the names of her guests' dates on the inside of the double folder.

But the invitations are so cute and attractive that no one has thought to look past the five glamorous ladies who represent the quintet of lovely honor guests, Elsa McCall, Helen McDuffie, Helen Randall, Isabel Vretnan and Margaret Winship.

As a consequence, Peggy is besieged with questions wherever she goes: "May I bring a date? Whom shall I bring with me?" etc.

But for fear some of her guests will fail to ask and will not find the name of their dates, Peggy has asked Sally Forth to help her out. And Sally promised to tell you that, in case your name is included on her guest list, you might well look inside of your invitation. You may find a delightful surprise awaiting you there.

Miss Marion Clarke, Fiance To Be Honored at Breakfast

Parties continue to be planned for Miss Marion Clarke and her fiancé, Reverdy Clarke, whose marriage will be a brilliant social event of December 28, taking place at the All Saints Episcopal church.

Mrs. Frank Penny has selected December 27 as the date for the breakfast at which she will honor the popular couple. The affair will be held at 10 o'clock at her home on Princeton avenue and invited for the occasion will be Mrs. Walton Clarke, Christian H. Clarke, Captain and Mrs. Christian H. Clarke Jr., and Misses Henrietta Farrow and Mildred Fleming, of Richmond, Va.

Mrs. Penny's daughter, Miss Dorothy Penny, will assist in entertaining.

Yesterday Miss Clarke was honored at a tea at which Miss Elizabeth Wilmot was hostess at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Miss Wilmot received her guests in the living room of the club which was beautifully decorated in the Christmas motif. The table, overlaid with a handsome lace cloth, was centered with a silver bowl filled with a graceful arrangement of red poinsettias and red roses. Completing the table appointments were silver candelabra holding burning red tapers.

The attractive hostess was assisted in entertaining by her aunt, Mrs. Leonora Raines, and Mrs. Walton Clarke, mother of the honor guest.

Fifty friends of the hostess and honor guests called between the hours of 4:30 and 6 o'clock.

Sharp Class Party.

The F. J. Sharp Bible Class of the Patillo Memorial Church of Decatur will have its annual Christmas party at the church this evening at 7:30 o'clock with members of other adult classes as guests. Baskets will be filled for the needy. F. J. Sharp, teacher, has been the leading factor in the upbuilding of the class, which now has 75 members.

The group gives much support to the church, besides outstanding charitable work throughout the year. Mrs. C. W. Gardner is president of the class.

Wash Sweaters With Special Care

Sweaters in the past year or so have become an all-season favorite with every one, young and old. The many, many new styles, new weaves and new designs are worn from morning until night for all occasions, from active sports to the most formal evening ensembles. Now, more than ever, we realize that fine sweaters need extra-special care. Much of their charm lies in their spick-and-spanness, in the gleam and freshness of their pretty colors, and upon being well kept before and after washing.

To help keep your sweaters and their knits looking their charming best, insuring safety to dainty colors and delicate fabrics, a textile research staff gives the following instructions for washing them.

1. Use lukewarm water—which feels just wet, rather than either hot or cold on your hands.

2. Swish a pure gentle white soap into rich, dirt-dissolving suds.
3. Lay your sweater flat on a turkish towel, and draw an outline of its contours with a soft pencil or a crayon.
4. Immerse your sweater in the suds, and wash by squeezing these suds through and through the fibers with your two hands. Be sure not to rub hard, for rubbing makes wool shrink and mat. If your sweater is badly soiled, you may have to repeat the process with fresh suds.
5. Squeeze out the suds and transfer the sweater to a bowl of clear, lukewarm water, being sure to support the sweater with one hand so that the weight of the water will not drag it out of shape.
6. Rinse your sweater at least twice, or until every trace of suds is gone. If the water is very hard, use the gradual rinse method—a small amount of water for the first rinse, and a larger amount for the second.

Squeeze out as much water as you can, but be sure not to wring your sweater. Then roll it up in a turkish towel, blotting out excess moisture, preventing dye stains, and cutting down on the hours you will have to wait for it to dry.

7. Lay the sweater flat again upon the turkish towel, where you marked its original outline, and pull it back to shape and size. If necessary, you can pin it in place with rustproof pins. Be sure to put a second towel between the folds, if your sweater is of more than one color.
8. Dry your sweater in an airy place, away from direct sunlight or from radiator heat. If you have an electric fan, that will hasten the drying.
9. If edges need to be straightened, or pin-marks ironed out, be sure to cover the spot to be pressed with a damp cloth, and use a moderately hot iron.

Your soft angoras and brushed wools should be shaken or brushed when they are dry, to bring back the fluffiness that is much of their appeal.

And you can blossom forth in delectable, immaculate sweaters from morning until night.

Calcium Shortage Bad On Sinus

By Dr. William Brady.

Air spaces in the bones of the face, called sinuses, are lined with mucous membrane and communicate through small openings with the rear of the nasal passages. Congestion, swelling, inflammation or infection of the mucous membrane or lining of the rear portion of the nasal passages may close or nearly close the opening into a sinus, or the inflammation or infection may spread into the lining of the sinus, and that is sinusitis.

One pair of sinuses between and behind the eyes are called ethmoid sinuses; another pair behind the brows are the frontal sinuses; a pair in the upper jawbone behind the cheeks are called maxillary sinuses or antra of Highmore. A pair of sphenoidal sinuses or rather a group of cells in the bone still deeper behind the nose are less frequently a source of trouble.

Inflammation or infection of a maxillary sinus often occurs from extension from the roof of an upper back tooth—roots of these teeth sometimes protrude through the floor of the sinus.

Allergy may be responsible for moderate sinus trouble, just as coryza, machinegun, sneezing, hyperesthetic rhinitis or annoying watering at the nose and temperamental stuffiness or congestion in one or the other nostril may be purely an allergic reaction. Aw, let's not talk about allergy now—if you are curious about it, send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for "Relief for Allergy."

In my opinion a factor which contributes to the development of sinus trouble in many instances is calcium shortage.

A leaflet distributed to the public by the Surgeon General, United States Public Health Service, Washington, D. C., under the comprehensive title "Sinus Infection: Cause, Symptoms, Treatment and Prevention" covers the question of symptoms gingerly enough:

A head cold that lingers on or repeated attacks of head colds may be the only warning that sinus disease is present. The usual symptoms are nasal obstruction and a discharge of mucus or pus, depending upon the severity of the infection. The discharge may be slight, and evident only as post-nasal dripping, or it may be very profuse. Dull headache or pain is present over the affected sinus. In the acute stage, when the natural drainage of the sinus is interfered with, headache is more severe.

Hedy Lamarr, starred in M-G-M's "Comrade X," is one who prefers to wear sweaters for sports or formals. Note how clean and fresh is the sweater she's wearing. This requires careful and correct washing and fitting.

Selznick Clients Ignored By the Warner Studio

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 18.—An interesting story is behind the announcement that Rosalind Russell will not play the lead in "Mr. Skeffington," and there is a possibility that this acting plum will revert to Garbo, who was first mentioned for the role. Miss Russell is a client of Agent Myron Selznick. So is Ann Sheridan. Warners are convinced that Ann's strike for more pay was instigated by her agent. And in an effort to slap back at him they're showing—or pretending to show—extreme lack of interest in the people Selznick represents. Fredric March, according to the studio, would like to do "One Foot in Heaven," but because he is a client of Selznick, Warners are acting coy. And there was some talk of Charles Laughton doing a picture at Warners. But he, too, is a client of Selznick. And the deal is cold. Selznick, however, has the last laugh because most of his clients are in big demand and can get a job anywhere else they like.

There are three Billy the Kids—no kidding—working in three Hollywood pictures. There's Robert Taylor in Metro's "Billy the Kid," Robert Steele in "Billy the Kid's Gun Justice," and newcomer Jack Beutel in Howard Hawks' "The Outlaw."

Errol Flynn continues his modern movie career with "Affectionately Yours," for which Loretta Young has been mentioned as his opposite. This would be the first film for Flynn and Miss Young, present over the affected sinus. In the acute stage, when the natural drainage of the sinus is interfered with, headache is more severe.

However, Loretta is another client of Agent Selznick. This fact may upset the deal. By the way, Miss Young has signed for Frank

New Princess-Style Shirtwaister

By Lillian Mae.

Place of honor in your workaday wardrobe goes, of course, to the shirtwaister—most becoming, trim and useful of styles! Pattern 4633 is a new Lillian Mae version of this old favorite, designed in simple-to-stitch princess lines that make you slim-and-tall. Wouldn't this dress be gay in a cotton print? Or try it in a checked spun rayon fabric or a sheer wool. The collar with its rounded revers forms a simple but becoming trim—it may be in self fabric or refreshing contrast. Make your sleeves long or short, and add scalloped cuffs to match the collar, if you like. This dress will do all-day duty at home or for neighborhood undercoat wear—and it's so easy to make with the Instructor Sheet for guidance!

Pattern 4633 is available in misses' and women's sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30 and 32. Size 16 takes 4 yards 35-inch fabric and 3-8 yard contrast.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly SIZE, NAME, ADDRESS and STYLE NUMBER.

Are you too tall? Too short? Too plump? Too slim? If you are irregularly proportioned in any way, let the Lillian Mae PERFECT FOUNDATION PATTERN 4114 take the guess-work out of dress-making. This "basic figure" pattern is fitted and adjusted to your exact measurements in tissue; then cut out in muslin for a permanent record. Pin your dress patterns to it, make the necessary changes, and the finished frock will fit with perfection. Designed for sizes 14 to 20; 32 to 50. Size 16 requires 3 3/8 yards 36-inch fabric. Price 15c.

Iron Out That Dowager's Hump

By Ida Jean Kain.

A dowager's hump perches flagrantly at the nape of your neck and, behind your back, it does you the ill turn of adding years to your looks. Well, you don't have to put up with it. That bump can literally be ironed away, leaving in its place a nice, smooth, young line.

The treatment is exercise, but of a very special kind. Any exercise which inclines the head and neck forward should be avoided for this helps the hump to grow. The best exercises are those which work the muscles at the nape of the neck and between the shoulders with the head held erect. Here is an excellent set:

1. Hold a towel back of the head, pulling it taut by the ends. Push against the towel with the back of the head as you stretch up with the neck. Repeat six times and rest.

2. Stand erect in good posture and turn the head slowly to touch the point of the chin to the shoulder tip. Then, very deliberately lower the head backward—don't let it drop back—and circle slowly around to touch the point of the chin to the other shoulder tip. Tense the throat muscles throughout the exercise. Afterwards, relax gradually.

3. Stand erect with shoulders relaxed, arms hanging heavily from the shoulders and down at the sides. Begin with the muscles around the hairline at the nape of the neck and contract them, slowly bringing more of the back muscles into the action until the shoulders are hunched up around the ears. Then draw the shoulder blades together, using the muscles between the shoulder blades rather than pushing the shoulder tips back. With the shoulder blades held tightly together, slowly draw them down, concentrating the muscular action along the upper part of the spinal column and downward. Then gradually let all the tension go out of the shoulder girdle. In this exercise, it is very important to counteract any tendency to let the head go forward and to keep the arms and shoulder tips out of the movement.

4. Standing, fold the arms behind the back and just below the shoulder blades. Try to shorten the distance between the head and the folded arms by lowering the head backward and forcibly contracting the back muscles. Always relax the muscles very gradually after performing an exercise.

Those four exercises will iron out a dowager's hump, provided you also cultivate the habit of holding your head squarely on your shoulders, neck stretched tall, chin held level, so that a perfect right angle is formed at the juncture of chin and throat.

MY DAY: Open Discussion Of Union Problem

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday.—Mrs. Thomas testified before the Tolan committee that, in order to join the electrical union here to get a job, her husband would have to pay $300. This seems to indicate this particular local is a rather high-priced club. All clubs offer benefits, and this particular testimony has brought me quite an avalanche of letters giving me information of various kinds.

As a justification, the people who approve of this fee state that their members receive many benefits and, in addition, that this rule keeps the standard of work high. If that standard should be let down, the danger of fire in all buildings would be greater.

On the other hand, one CIO union member, from somewhere in the wide open spaces, notifies me that in his union the charge is $1.50, which would seem to make his club a little less exclusive. If a man has been out of work for some time, my informant adds, he can pay it in installments out of his first earnings. I suppose a man can pay the $300 in installments, too, but it might take a bit longer.

Judging from the letters I have received, there seems to be considerable interest in this subject and all of us might profit from a real out-in-the-open discussion of the whole situation.

I received a most interesting communication the other day from the Savings Bank Life Insurance Council, in which my correspondent discussed the savings bank life insurance method out in Massachusetts 30 years ago through Judge Brandeis' efforts. Under this plan, life insurance issued by mutual savings banks "over the counter" seems to meet the needs of the average wage earner rather satisfactorily.

Governor Lehman, of New York, succeeded in having this form of life insurance adopted in New York state in 1939. Those who have studied the problem of helping the small wage earner, many of whom go without food to pay insurance premiums, seem to think that this type of insurance meets the needs of this group of people better than any other.

Try Modern Wassail Bowl

By Sally Saver.

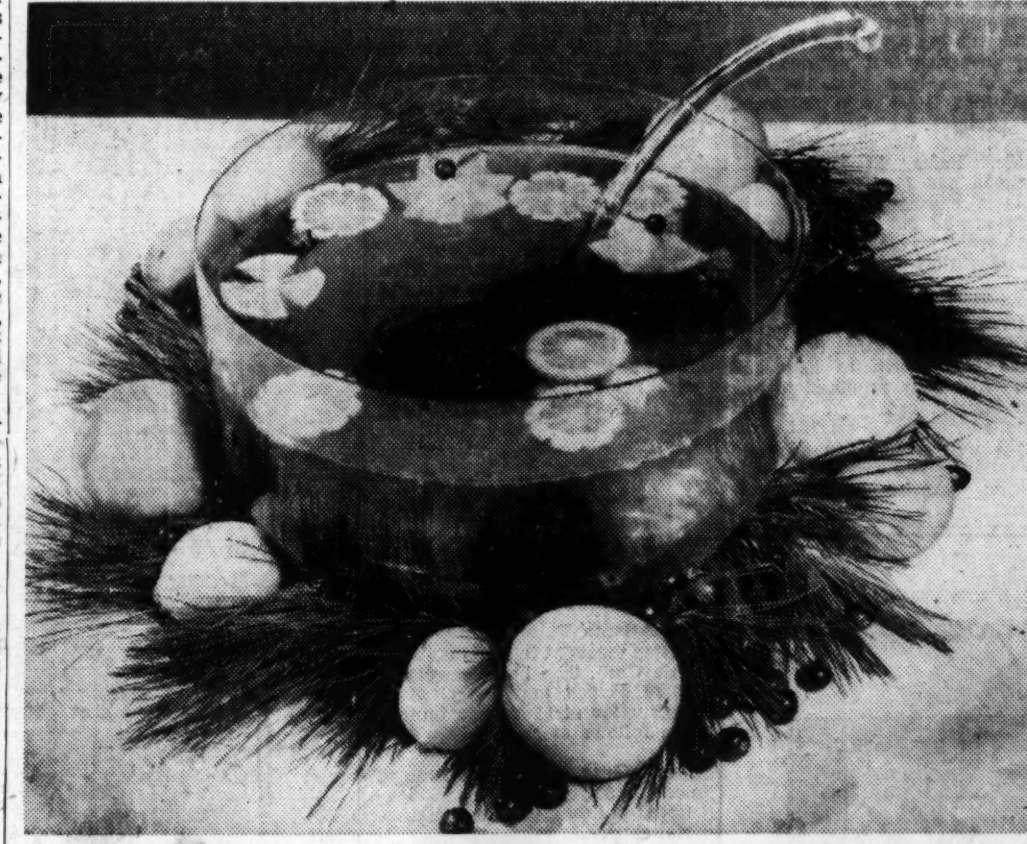

With every day bringing us closer to Christmas, busy homemakers are adding the last-minute touches to their plans for a merry time. All the special cakes and candies, the Christmas dinner in all its detail and traditional dishes are being prepared for in advance. If you are one who loves the old customs of Christmas tide, celebrate the warm and friendly cheer of this season with a wassail bowl of hot punch. The wassail bowl, you may remember, is an old English custom and originally the drink a kind of punch held spices, meat, toast and roasted apples. The health of relatives and friends was drunk at Christmas time from the great fragrant bowl and pledges made to each drinker. A modern version of the wassail bowl is a splendid idea for those of us who keep open house Christmas afternoon and night, and here is the recipe for filling your punch bowl:

Wassail Bowl Christmas Punch.

- 4 cups water
- 4 cups cranberries
- 2 cups boiling water
- 8 teaspoons tea
- 2 cups sugar
- 3 cups orange juice
- 1 cup lemon juice
- 2 quarts ice water

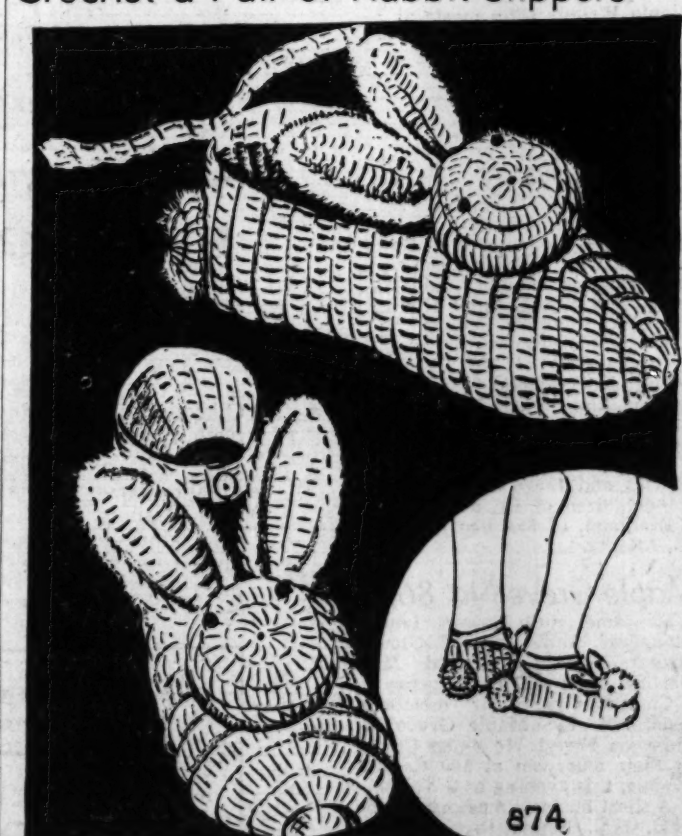

Orange and lemon slices for garnish.

Cook cranberries in 4 cups water until skins pop open. Strain through cheesecloth. Pour 2 cups boiling water over tea. Steep 5 minutes. Strain and add to hot cranberry juice. Dissolve sugar in the warm liquid. Cool. Add orange and lemon juices and the 2 quarts ice water. Garnish with orange and lemon slices. May be served cold or hot. For hot punch substitute boiling water for ice water and combine with other ingredients while tea and cranberry liquid is hot.

A modern version of the ancient "Wassail" is spiced hot punch.

Garden Division Decorates Home of Mrs. L. K. Tilghman

The Garden Hills Woman's Club's garden division recently decorated the home of Mrs. L. K. Tilghman, at 476 Pinetree drive, in Christmas effect. Mrs. Lila Pierce won first prize for buffet arrangement. Unusual beauty was displayed in effectiveness of white pottery bowls filled with pyracantha gracefully trailing over each end of buffet. Each side of bowl was flanked by three white candleholders, holding red candles graduating in heights.

Above a round mirror a garland of pyracantha was entwined with ivy. A spray of the pyracantha was placed over the mirror with a red satin ribbon bow. The ivy and pyracantha continued down each side of mirror.

Second prize went to Mrs. J. V. Booth for mantel arrangement, done in red, green and gold magnolia leaves combined with green magnolia leaves to form the background. At each end of the mantel were red candleholders concealing lighted candles. A gold antique clock was placed in the center and a round mirror framed in gold hung over the mantelpiece.

Mrs. J. R. Jameson won third prize on dining table arrangement. White china and crystal were arranged on a white linen cloth. Gold letters formed the place cards, sprays of green pine were banked in the middle of the table to form the centerpiece, which was placed on four gold-lace paper doilies.

Four gold cones were placed among the pine and were filled with nuts. Gold Christmas tree balls were piled in clusters in the pine.

augmented with gold-tipped pine cones. Red altar candles were placed at each end of the table in groups of three.

Fourth prize was won by Mrs. R. A. Eubanks for breakfast-table arrangement. A Santa Claus, white reindeer and clusters of green and purple grapes completed a pleasing arrangement. Miniature white Santa Claus dogs were decorated with red ribbon.

An attractive coffee table was done by Mrs. I. L. Partee. Magnolia leaves were arranged to resemble a large poinsettia, and in the center were small red Christmas tree balls.

The chest arrangement was done by Mrs. L. K. Tilghman. In a large Chinese pottery bowl, several branches of mock orange was stuck into a mound of moss and cranberries were fastened on the mock-orange branches.

A desk was treated by Mrs. C. P. Ward. A gold vase was filled with red flowers and small figurines were placed near by.

Mrs. J. R. Greene decorated end tables, using bubble bowls filled with red partridge berries, offset by a green dish filled with red and green candies.

Breakfast room windows were attractively done in Mexican style, in white swag with edging of red, and caught into red wooden rings. Cascading from the top on each side were red and green pine cones.

The front door was done by Mrs. R. W. Johnson, featuring a spray of pyracantha and cedar tied with red ribbon.

Breakfast buffet was decorated with a large silver tray heaped with mounds of fruit. Mrs. Reid decorated the console with blue Mexican glass and holly.

The smoking stand was decorated by Mrs. J. R. Meath. A Santa Claus stocking was arranged along with a tiny vase of red berries. Miniature candle-

Miss Sampson To Have Guest

Among attractive members of the sub-city set returning from college to spend the Christmas holidays here is Miss Marnie Sampson, lovely blond daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sampson, who arrives Friday to visit her parents at their Club drive residence.

On December 26 Miss Sampson will go to Columbus, where she will attend holiday festivities as the guest of her roommate, Miss Cornelia Stokes. Accompanied by Miss Stokes, the Atlanta belle will return to this city on December 28, and the following day Mrs. Sampson will honor the duo at a luncheon in the Mirador room of the Capital City Club.

New Year's Day will find the popular college belles in Columbus again, where a round of Yuletide parties will be enlivened by their presence.

Miss Sampson's brother, Allen Sampson, returned yesterday from the University of Georgia, where he is a student, and will spend the holidays with his parents.

holders held red candles.

Mrs. D. L. McCleskey was the judge of arrangements. Mrs. W. Clyde Roberts gave a Christmas reading, "Leisure," by Grace Crowell. Miss Martha Anderson spoke on Christmas lighting.

Miss Wiley Feted.

Miss Jaynelle Wiley was entertained recently at a miscellaneous shower by Mrs. Travis Acree and Mrs. LaFollette Harris at the home of Mrs. Acree on Warren street. Miss Wiley will marry Ernest Christianson today.

Misses Carolyn and Evelyn Robinson and Sarah Adams gave a bathroom shower at the former's home recently for Miss Wiley.

The bride-elect's mother, Mrs. H. F. Wiley, honored her daughter at a trousseau tea on Monday evening.

Assisting Mrs. Wiley were Misses Sue Hall, Oppie Lee Cooper, Mrs. Willard Payne, Mrs. Charles Purcell and Mrs. Luther Manning, sister of the bride-elect, who escorted the guests through the house and were then received by Mrs. Fred Dunn and Mrs. Tom Pate for refreshments in the dining room.

MISS JEANNETTE ESTES.

Miss Estes Makes Her Debut At Brilliant Supper-Dance

All the glitter and gaiety of the Yuletide was expressed in the beautiful decorations adorning the Piedmont Driving Club when Miss Jeannette Estes, lovely debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry Grady Estes, made her formal bow to society last evening.

The elaborate affair highlighted the debutante's birthday and took the form of a supper-dance assembling several hundred members of Atlanta's social set.

Frosty white bowls of brilliant red poinsettias centered the buffet tables in the ballroom, these artistic arrangements having been flanked on either side by silver candelabra holding Christmas red tapers. Garlands of asparagus fern formed a delicate tracery on the cloths.

At the far end of the ballroom, before the fireplace, gleamed a gaily decorated Christmas tree atwinkle with colored lights, silver balls and icicles.

The receiving line stood at the right of the ballroom, before a background of Cybodium fern and palms. A lyre, gracefully fashioned of gleaming white metal, centered the backdrop, and was starred with the myriad of gift orchids sent the popular debutante. At either side were placed colorful flowers also sent by Miss Estes' admiring friends.

Receiving with the honor guest were her parents and her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George Vance, of Greenville, S. C.

Miss Estes' golden blond beauty was offset by her gown of ice-blue slipper satin, the off-shoulder neckline featuring a finch of sparkling iridescent sequins studded in a flower pattern. The bouffant skirt billowed from a snug basque, and her only ornaments were a single strand of beautifully matched pearls and a pearl bracelet. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink camellias, pink bouvardia and valley lilies. A spray of pink camellias adorned her hair.

Mrs. Grady Estes, mother of the debutante, wore white chiffon sprinkled with rhinestones and fashioned with a becoming V neckline and a full, graceful skirt. A shoulder spray of deep purple orchids completed her attire.

Mrs. Vance wore for her sister's debut a dramatic gown of gold lame designed with a draped bodice, and worn with a shoulder cluster of green and bronze orchids.

The entrance to the club was lavishly decorated with palms and greenery, garlands of southern smilax veiling the lights here. Ropes of smilax also festooned the ceiling of the foyer, while groupings of palms marked the entrance to the ballroom.

Lights in the ballroom sparkled through laurel ropes draped across the ceiling to form a rich green canopy over the dancers. Clusters of smilax topping the colonial columns extended to form a festoon effect, and feathery evergreen trees adorned the corners of the room.

The orchestra platform was bordered with a miniature white picket fence interlaced with smilax, and flanked on either side by clusters of palms. Punch tables, placed at intervals, were centered with bowls resting on plateaux of holly red and white ers.

Assisting in entertaining at the brilliant affair were Mr. and Mrs. George Vance, of Greenville, S. C., brother and sister of the debu-

Miss Swanstrom Plans Open House

Members and friends of the Gamma Delta Beta sorority, numbering 100, will be honored Sunday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock by Miss Esther Mae Swanstrom, popular sub-deb, who will entertain at an open house at her home on East Wesley road.

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

Great Director

Charlie Elliott is the most amazing director of wildlife the state of Georgia has ever had. How he has found the time to do it I do not know, but since he has been installed at the head of the department, Elliott, among other things, has written the most complete textbook on conservation available today.

And, believe it or not, the guy can cook, too. It wasn't a phony—the picture Kenneth Rogers took yesterday of Charlie Elliott in a chef's cap. Elliott can really cook, whether it be Canadian goose or western steak.

This piece is not inspired, however, by the fact that Charlie Elliott returned from North Carolina with geese he himself had shot and was thoughtful enough to share the wildlife wealth with Atlanta sports writers at a most sumptuous dinner.

No one in the sports-writing game hereabouts has taken the time heretofore to give credit where credit is due.

I don't make any apologies for the opening statement that Charlie Elliott is the most amazing director of wildlife Georgia has ever had. He is.

Elliott organized a very fine wildlife rangers' unit to protect the state's game and fish. He has been tremendously active in co-operation with the U. S. Forest Service in promoting game management areas. All this in addition to his prolific activities in connection with state game clubs, schools, etc.

In his spare time Charlie Elliott wrote a most comprehensive textbook on conservation, and he wrote many other articles for outstanding outdoor publications, including the state's own "Outdoor Georgia."

Elliott is a man of boundless energy, keen foresight and many talents. The U. S. Forest Service heads regard him as one of the finest men in his line in America.

Fine Book In writing the text on conservation, which every school child in America well could study with great future profit for this country, Elliott has treated three broad phases of American outdoor life.

"We tried to show all the resources," he said yesterday. "We tried to show what the white man found when he arrived . . . a country teeming with unlimited natural resources and game. And then there was the period of exploitation, when the game was ruthlessly shot, and there was general destruction of resources; and last there is the period of restoration, and what we must do now to continue as a prosperous nation."

Charlie Elliott has written and compiled a great textbook, amply illustrated, and covering every phase of conservation in a highly intelligent manner.

Now to return to supervising Chef Elliott. There was, on the menu besides Canadian geese, wild rice and similar comestibles at the A. A. C. yesterday.

Pushing back from the festive board, when the goose no longer was hanging high, Atlanta writers were thankful for the unerring aim of Charlie Elliott.

It is a bit difficult to beat, or even tie, a wildlife director who not only is a great director, but a crack shot and unexcelled cook as well.

And you may note, too, that he is a true conservationist. He did not bag the game in Georgia. He brought it in from North Carolina. He'd probably do the same if he were giving a quail dinner. Nothing like conserving your own resources.

Just to show what kind of a horse trader he is, Elliott, on the same North Carolina trip, traded four beavers for two pairs of wild turkeys. Contrary to belief, beavers are plentiful in Georgia; wild turkeys are not.

The turkeys are to be kept at the game farm and many

Neale Resigns At Yale, Will Tutor Steelers

Ex-Major Leaguer Signs One-Year Contract, Effective March 1.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The resignation of Earle (Greasy) Neale as an assistant football coach at Yale to become head coach of the Pittsburgh Steelers, of the National Professional League, was announced tonight by Ogden Miller, Ells' athletic director.

Neale came to Yale in 1934 as Head Coach Ducky Pond's first lieutenant. His resignation was accepted with regrets.

Neale has coached various college teams in the east and in 1921 his undefeated Washington and Jefferson football eleven went to the Rose Bowl and played a scoreless tie with the University of California. He also played major league baseball with Cincinnati and was assistant manager of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1929 and 1930.

Neale Supervised Steeler's 'Draft.'

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 18.—(UP) Alex Thompson, new owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers, announced tonight that Earle (Greasy) Neale has signed a one-year contract to coach the Steelers.

The contract becomes effective March 1, 1941, when Neale is released from his Yale contract.

The announcement was not unexpected as Neale had attended the football league's draft meeting in Washington, D. C., last week and advised Thompson on the picking of senior college players.

Fulton Gridders Honored Today

The Fulton High grid team will hold their annual banquet at the school cafeteria today at 12:30. Coach Wills' eleven got off to a bad start this year, but were tough late in the season, downing Griffin High, 6 to 0, on the last play of one game.

Red Burman May End Dempsey's Long Search

Experts Give Redhead Fine Chance To Upset Joe Louis When They Fight January 31.

By THAD HOLT.
America's greatest sports story of 1941 may be written in the ring at Madison Square Garden, New York, on the night of January 31, when Clarence (Red) Burman attempts to wrest the heavyweight boxing title from Joe Louis.

Right after the Brown Bomber belted old Jim Braddock from his throne at Chicago on June 22, 1937, Jack Dempsey announced to the world he was launching a search for a "white hope"—a search the one-time Manassa Mauler vowed would never end until Louis was defeated.

Red Burman is Dempsey's fighter. He is the boy Jack hopes will end the search which has seen him travel countless miles and invest thousands of dollars in a vain attempt to discover a white bomber. Dempsey has tested youngsters from almost every section and state in the union. Remember Joe Lipps, of Ty Ty, Ga.? He was just another of the many aspiring young pugilists who failed to make the grade.

Dempsey and other experienced boxing men believe Red Burman, and not Billy Conn, stands the best chance of beating Louis.

Over and over again Dempsey has said: "The man who beats Louis must be equipped to punch with either hand. He must be able to take an unusual amount of punishment and he must not be afraid to mix it with the Bomber."

Conn is strictly a boxer. He could never knock out Louis. He is somewhat frail and fragile and it is doubtful if he could stay away from the Bomber for 12 or 15 rounds.

Sharing Dempsey's belief that Burman has a real chance are some of the solomons of the fight game, including Max Waxman, manager of both Dempsey's and Burman's interests; Eddie Ross, veteran trainer of the redhead; Joe Gould, Nat Fleischer, Ken Overlin, Chris Dundee, Lou Fink, who trained both Gene Tunney and Tony Canzoneri, and Joe Woodman and George Lawrence, who handled the two greatest Sams, McVey and Langford.

Eddie Ross, whose opinion is respected wherever fight men gather, had this to say in a letter received yesterday: "Red will let nothing stand in his way of becoming champion. He has no fear of Joe Louis or any other heavyweight, and will not be licked in the dressing room a la Baer. He is well aware that a victory means life security for him and his wife and kids, and win he will."

Burman, 25 years old, standing 5 feet 11 and weighing 182 pounds, has been training at Madame Bey's camp at Summit, N. J., for two weeks.

The boxing world has heard very little about the Baltimore boy because he couldn't get fights. For a long time Mike Jacobs and Jack Dempsey didn't get along, and since Jacobs controls the fight game, Burman simply was left out in the cold. When Red landed a fight, he did a good job. He beat Tommy Farr more decisively than did Louis, and twice bumped Steve Dudas. He also beat Charley Massera and kayode Buddy Knox, Joe Sekyra, Tony Celli and others.

DIXIE STEEL TAKES FIRST.
Dick Dodgen's big Dixie Steel forged into undisputed possession of first place in the Walworth City League by squeaking out a 21-10 win over a battling Georgia Power club at Fulton High Wednesday night. The Steelmen have registered four straight victories and need only one more success to clinch the first half championship.

Led by the high-scoring Billy Cartwright and Jackie Pounds, Sears & Roebuck blasted General Shoe out of the undefeated class by scoring a surprising 65-10 win. Cartwright tallied 23 points and Pounds counted 18.

In the other contest, Central Cafe outlasted Four Square to win by a 46-10-35 count.

Y. M. S. A. MEETS FOUR SQUARE.
Y. M. S. A. will meet Four Square at 7 o'clock in the feature game of the Civic League schedule tonight on the "Y" court. This game will pitting one of the teams from the undefeated class.

There will be but two games with Fulton National Bank playing Dental College "B" at 8 o'clock.

Fulton Will Play 15 More Contests

With some of the preliminary games behind for his team, Coach C. C. Wills yesterday announced the remainder 1940-41 basketball schedule of Fulton High's Redbirds.

Fifteen games remain on the docket before the annual N.G.I.C. tournament to which Fulton has been host for the past three years.

Bobby Alloway 2.62 Runs Per Contest in '40

Leonard Lost 19 Games Besse Had Highest Earned-Run Average

By GEORGE KIRKSEY.
NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(UP) Any pitching laurels that Bobby Feller didn't capture last season weren't worth winning, the official American League pitching lease today revealed.

The Cleveland ace captured lion's share of the pitching prize all the way from leading in games won to facing the most batters. That the Cleveland Indians did win the pennant is a sad commentary on the rest of the ball club after perusing Feller's pitching record.

Here are some of Feller's pitching titles:

Earned run leader—2.62.
Strike-out king—261.
On! no-hit, no-run game.
Appeared in most games—4.
Pitched most innings—320.
Faced most batters—1,168.
Pitched most complete games—31.
Won most games—27.

There were a couple of pitching championships Feller didn't capture. He failed to lead in highest percentage, finishing third. Schoolboy Rowe and Buck Newsom of the Tigers among the five regulars. Rowe was the man with 16 victories and the defeats for an average of .711. Newsom came next with 21 wins and five losses for a mark of .875. Then came Feller with 27 victories and 11 losses for an average of .711. There were other scattered nodesepts mixed up the first 10 but they were lows like Archie McKain, Carrasquel and Earl Johnson who didn't work in many games.

Four snafus.
Another laurel Feller didn't outright was for pitching the most shutouts. He had to share this title with his teammate, Milnar, a southpaw, and the veteran Ted Lyons of the White Sox, each with four whitewashes. Feller's earned run average 2.62 was topped by one man, nie Bonham, Yankee rookie who joined the club in midseason, the latter pitched only 93 innings and thereby was deprived of a chance of recognition as the leader. Bonham's figure was a markable 1.91.

As a result of Feller's consistently great pitching the Indians won the club earned a title with 3.68. The White Sox came next with 3.74, the Yankees third with 3.89 and the champions Tigers fourth with 4.01. Thus can be deduced that the Tiger hard-hitting won the flag for the

Mississippi State's First Line Is Unscored On for Two Seasons

Wouldn't Swap For Any Team's Line--McKeen

Maroons Rather Light for Big-Timers, But Push Giants Around.

By MORTIMER KREEGER.
STATE COLLEGE, Miss., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Before Georgetown's boys start their trek south to the Orange Bowl, they might do well to stop by at Secretary of War Stimson's place and borrow some of his medium weight tanks. For if they plan to barge through or around the Mississippi line January 1 with nothing more than human muscle, bone and courage they'll be undertaking a chore that has been one of the most difficult feats for the past two seasons.

The Maroons' first line did not field a single score on rushing plays during 1939 or 1940. The second line allowed one each year, Louisiana State both times.

AVERAGE 1.2 YARDS.
Enemy backs ran 169 plays against the first line during the season and wound up with only 205 net yards to show—an average of 1.2 per play. At the other side of the wall they lost more than they gained against All-America End Buddy Elrod, John Tripson and Hunter Cornhorn, second All-America guard.

Those seven stalwarts even drew praise today from Coach Lynn McKeen, who broke a long-standing tradition against patting a man on the back before they are finished competition.

"I think it's the best line in the Southeastern Conference," he declared unequivocally, "and I wouldn't swap it for any in the country."

WEIGHS 197 POUNDS.
The first line averages 197 pounds and the second 191, both their light for modern big-time football. They'll be giving 10 pounds or more to the man to the boys forwards.

However, the Maroons are accustomed to facing bigger men. In the manner in which they shed the ponderous Alabama team around, which they had to get the Orange Bowl bid. A good indication of the calibre of the State's line as a whole is in the difference of opinion about individual ability.

Although, Elrod is an All-America and Cornhorn on the second All-America, there are many Mississippi who contend Guy Dowell is a better guard than Cornhorn and Tripson is the best lineman on the squad.

Boys' High To Get Dartmouth Cup

The Dartmouth Cup, annually presented to the G. I. A. A. football champions, will be awarded to the Boys' High team this morning at about 11:30 at the regular morning assembly in the Henry Grady auditorium. A. H. Sturges will make the presentation to the Purple's captain, Hoyt Fincher.

The first Dartmouth trophy was retired by Boys' High several years ago when they won it for the third time. By virtue of their winning of the G. I. A. A. titles last year and this the Purple's will have to cop the crown only once more to retire the trophy now in circulation.

'Finest Bunch I Ever Coached,' Says Russell Coach at Banquet

Wildcats Banqueted After Successful Grid Season; Bowen Rounds Out His 11th Season as Mentor.

By JOHN MARTIN.
Russell High slipped over a fast season, practically unnoticed and yesterday climaxed it with a slick banquet that made many more widely heralded fetes a mere bowl of thin soup and corn pone.

The Wildcats won seven games and lost two during the past season, coming within eight points of having a perfect season, and at a banquet in the school's spacious cafeteria they heard their praises sung by a battery that included Principal Paul D. West and Coach R. L. Bowen.

Coach Bowen, whose greatest fault is his own modesty, stepped out with a colorful job of oratory, garnished with homespun jokes, and called the 1940 Russell team the "finest bunch, if not the best players, I have ever coached."

Bowen has just rounded out his 11th year as head man in the Cats' corner.

Mr. West, an artful master of ceremonies, introduced speakers, which included Carlos Hemperley, George Sparks, Paul Glover and others.

Members of the squad were awarded sweaters, letters and certificates. Six seniors were awarded gold footballs. Among the letter and gold football winners were six of the Wildcats who won places in The Constitution's All-City B Division squad. They were Wilford Fanning, Ben Morris, Charlie Hooper, Leslie Roberts, Tommy Cranford and Billy McBrayer.

The Wildcats will lose most of their line, but will be able to field a veteran set of backs next fall.

This year they won over Decatur, LaGrange, West Fulton, Fulton, R. E. Lee, Griffin and Gainesville. Hapeville slipped on the Cats with an opening night 7-6 victory and North Fulton gained a 7-0 decision in their only losses.

The school's team of pretty cheer leaders shared the festivities at the banquet, which was provided and served by Miss Ruth Colley's super Superlative Club, home economics students.

Mentzer, Kaiser Are Golf Winners

The Metropolitan Women Golfers held a one day meet at Candler park Wednesday. Prizes were awarded for the best putter and Mrs. Max Mentzer and Mrs. A. J. Kaiser tied with a score of 30.

Other winners were Mrs. A. C. Baird and Mrs. Roger Martin. Special prizes went to Mrs. William G. Hastings and Mrs. H. F. Wiedeman.

over the Indians' superior pitching.

Ken Chase, Washington southpaw, was the league's wild man. He replaced Feller in that department, granting 143 passes, one more than Bullet Bob issued in 1939. Feller's base-on-balls record improved considerably. He walked only 118 men. Chase tied Porter Vaughan, Athletics' rookie, for the most wild pitches, each with 12.

Leonard Won 14.
Dutch Leonard, Washington, and George Caster, Athletics, were the heaviest losers, each dropping 19 decisions. Leonard's record wasn't as bad as his 19 defeats indicates. He won 14 and had an earned run record of 3.49. Caster, however, won only four games and had an earned run record of 6.57, placing him only five notches from the bottom. Herman Besse, Athletics' rookie, had the worst earned run mark, 8.83 for 73 innings in 17 games.

An odd feature was supplied by Chubby Dean, Athletics' southpaw, who shut out the Yanks at Yankee stadium April 23, the first time any pitcher has turned that trick since September, 1937.

The 10 leading pitchers on the basis of earned runs follow:

young raised for distribution in Georgia's fields, according to plans.

Bright Outlook Georgians are looking forward to many more profitable years of game restoration and propagation under the direction of Elliott.

He has proved by deed, rather than in mere words, what a valuable asset he is to the state of Georgia.

Georgia's legislature has held him back somewhat. By that I mean the legislators have failed to pass an enabling act, which simply amounts to a formality, and by this failure have prevented the state from obtaining government wildlife appropriations.

These appropriations amount to a considerable batch of the old do-re-mi. Elliott, as have other directors in the past, has had to struggle along without these funds.

It may be safely said now, in view of the awakened interest of sportsmen, that the legislators will be urged to take the necessary action for Georgia to procure the funds when next they convene.

I would like to see Charlie Elliott in action under the right conditions. There is no limit to what he might accomplish for the future good of Georgia's outdoor life.

It is a pleasure to write a piece about Charlie Elliott as a wildlife director, because the writer knows that whatever he might say in Elliott's behalf, the latter can back up two-fold.

Entitled To Best Often the State Wildlife Department, not only in Georgia, but in many other states, has been referred to as a political football. And I am sure there has been some justification for this designation.

But sportsmen of the state feel that their day is coming. And they are entitled to the best, the sportsmen are, for, after all, the money they spend in hunting and fishing licenses provides the bulk of operating expenses.

In fact, without government aid, the license fees constitute the sum and total of these expenses.

The wildlife outlook right now is brighter than in recent years, and it is the sincere hope of all interested parties that it will continue so.

McNair Is Sold To Detroit Nine At Waiver Tag

Tigers Evade No-Trade Rule in Claiming White Sox Infielder.

DETROIT, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Barred from trading by an American League rule, the champion Detroit Tigers nevertheless completed another player transaction today.

President Walter O. Briggs announced that the club had acquired the services of Eric McNair, 30-year-old infielder, from the Chicago White Sox at the waiver price of $7,500.

McNair, a right-handed batsman, has played with Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago since he entered the American League in the closing days of the 1929 season. He has played second base, shortstop and third base. The Detroit club indicated that McNair would serve as a utility infielder. Detroit's regular infield, composed of Rudy York at first base, Charley Gehring at second, Dick Bartell at shortstop and Pinky Higgins at third, is the oldest in the major leagues.

McNair batted .227 for the White Sox in 66 games last season. He enjoyed his best season in the majors in 1939, when he batted .324.

Last week the Tigers sold Outfielder Ervin (Pete) Fox to the Boston Red Sox in a straight cash transaction.

Atlanta 'Y' Meets Baldwin College

TIFTON, Ga., Dec. 18.—The Golden Stallions of Baldwin College and Coach Orion Mitchell left Wednesday on a road trip on which they are scheduled to play basketball teams in Griffin, Barnesville and Atlanta.

The players making the trip are Layton, Mashburn, Moore, Pruitt, Pitts, West, Holder, Gillispie, McGee and Kilgore.

The Stallions played the Griffin five Wednesday night. They will play Gordon, Barnesville, Thursday night, and the Atlanta Y. M. C. A. team Friday night.

HOME ON THE RANGE—Charlie Elliott, director of the State Wildlife Division, is as much at home in the kitchen as he is outdoors. The popular wildlife chief yesterday was host to Atlanta newspapermen at a Canada goose luncheon at the Atlanta Athletic Club, and is pictured here as he carved the geese, which guests heartily agreed made championship eating material.

Thousands Cheer As Eagles Leave

BOSTON, Dec. 18.—(AP)—While bands played and thousands cheered, 41 of Boston College's invincible Eagles took off tonight for Bay St. Louis, Miss., where they will complete training for their New Year's Sugar Bowl engagement with Tennessee at New Orleans.

The players were given a rousing sendoff by a huge throng of admirers who piled into the busy South railroad station and tied it up in knots just at the peak of the commuters' rush hour.

"Tennessee should be a breeze for our boys after this send-off," Head Coach Frank Leady said when he boarded the train.

"Seriously," he added, "Tennessee is a great team, undoubtedly better than any we faced during the season, and one of the best in the country. Our boys will fight and give all they have. We hope for the best."

Mercer Committee Hears Suggestions

MACON, Ga., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Recommendations for a new athletic policy were under consideration tonight by the executive committee of the Mercer University board of trustees.

The board recently voted to de-emphasize football, cut the salary of the athletic director and curtail aid to athletes.

A joint faculty and trustee committee drafted recommendations this afternoon supposed to be official and final, subject to approval of the executive committee.

Butts Is Honored At Thomasville

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Dec. 18.—The annual banquet honoring the football squad of Thomasville High school, given by Bank of Thomas county, was held Tuesday night with Wallace Butts, coach of University of Georgia, as guest of honor.

The member of the team who is considered the most valuable in the eyes of his fellow players, of the coaches and teachers, and therefore wins the wristwatch presented by the Bank of Thomas-ville each year, was William Joye. Coach Butts showed pictures of his winning 1940 football team in action at different games of the year, thus giving pointers to the high school team.

ABOUT JIMMY WILSON

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 18.—The Cubs had a great guy leading them by the name of Gabby Hartnett. A great guy and a great ball player, one of the great catchers of all time.

They have another great guy at the helm in Jimmy Wilson, the odds-on star of the last World's Series.

The first time I ever had the chance to know Jimmy Wilson well came about in Bradenton, Fla., around 1934.

Early that spring I had a golf and fishing date with a young fellow by the name of Dizzy Dean. We all met that night above the purling Manatee, and Jimmy was there. Someone suggested a rubber of bridge: "Sure, I play bridge," Dizzy said.

"I'll tell you a funny thing about this bum," Wilson told me. "He never played a game of bridge in his life, but still he'd play against Sims and Culbertson for three cents a point, and expect to win."

Ole Diz just sat by and grinned. "I ain't never played before," he said, "but you ain't no Sims or Culbertson either. You're just a catcher. I can make any catcher look good."

The important part is that after Diz had learned what spades, hearts, diamonds and clubs meant, he was about as good as anybody else. Which is no boost for Jimmy and myself.

The Big Shift.

"Yes," Wilson said, "maybe you can make me look good as a catcher, Diz. But least I made you look good as a human being."

"How's that?" Dean asked.

"I'll tell you, if you've forgotten," Wilson said. "After you had been with the club a week, as a rookie, I kept missing my silk shirts. You landed here a year ago with a fast ball and one shirt. And it wasn't even good cotton. And then suddenly I caught you one day with only one of my silk shirts on."

"You know what he said to me?" Wilson said. "Listen, Jimmy, you wouldn't want the greatest pitcher that ever lived going around in one shirt all season, would you?"

"I know you're too swell a guy to do a thing like that to a young pitcher who is better than Walter Johnson, Christy Mathewson or Alexander. You know I'm better than those fellows. I jes' knew it would make you feel bad, having to catch me, to have that happen. So I just borrowed one of those silk shirts. It felt good. The only shirts I'd ever worn were made out of alfalfa or maybe no shirts at all."

"How many of my shirts did you steal?" Wilson asked.

"Only two," Dizzy said. "They ought to last me for a lifetime, they way I wear 'em, until they fall off."

This is where Jimmy Wilson rose to the true heights of greatness. "I don't think two silk shirts are good enough," he said to Diz, "for a pitcher who is greater than Johnson, Mathewson or Alexander. I've only one silk shirt left. I think you'd better call around and pick it up, before you grab it anyway. After all, I only a catcher handling the great Dean."

"That's the way I feel about it," Dizzy said. "I'll be around tomorrow and pick it up." Which Ole Diz did. And then lost the cost of four silk shirts to Wilson playing golf the next day.

It never occurred to Dizzy that any one could beat him then at any game.

He would have played Shakespeare ten dollars Nassau on sonnets, or Shelley $20 Nassau on odes.

There was a ball player you won't see again in this lifetime. He may have been a game bird who flew funny—but he always flew.

The Series Eve.

I saw Jimmy Wilson again, off and on, until we met the day before the last World's Series in Cincinnati.

JIMMY WILSON
(He Gets Along)

for the last World's Series in Cincinnati.

"So you'll have to catch most of this series," I said, knowing that big Ernie Lombardi had an ankle bigger than an elephant's instep.

"I couldn't stand up over three innings," Wilson answered. "I've been out of active baseball for two years. I'm over 40 years old and I've been around a long time. I might have gotten in better shape if I'd known five weeks ago I was to be needed. And I wouldn't have been so hot, even then. I'd hate to have to catch a full nine innings now. They'd have to carry me off the field to a hospital. Catching is the toughest job in baseball. I mean both physically and mentally. And I was slipping over three years ago."

Jimmy Wilson had to catch more than three innings. He had to catch more than three games. In one of the hardest of all World's Series, one that went to the limit of seven games, he had to be a vital factor in six of the seven games played.

He finished each contest completely worn out, too tired and too sore to even move around. His back ached. He could just about lift his right arm. He had incipient charley horses in both legs. He was too tired to sleep at night.

But knowing that the show must go on—that he was only even remotely available—he saved the Red cause by one of the greatest exhibitions under heavy pressure I have ever seen in sport.

Jimmy Wilson didn't give Dizzy Dean the shirt off his back. He gave him three shirts off his back. All the silk ones he had.

And he gave the Cincinnati Reds and the National League the hide off his heart.

Which is just a trifle finer fabric than any silk ever manufactured.

So here's wishing Jimmy Wilson a merry Christmas, and three rousing cheers for the coming campaign of 1941.

Jurges To Leave For Florida Rest

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The Giants received cheering news today in the form of an announcement by five specialists that Billy Jurges, the club's shortstop and infield mainspring, had "made definite improvement."

Joins Lajoie, Cobb and Simmons; Applying Is Second.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(UP)—Batting champion of the American league for the second successive year, Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankees' center fielder, today moved into the select company of Larry Lajoie, Ty Cobb and Al Simmons as a repeater for the swat crown.

The official batting averages, released today, show DiMaggio won the title with an average of .352 compared to his winning mark of .381 in 1939. Since the days of those two peerless hitters, Lajoie and Cobb, only one modern batsman has repeated as a batting champion—Al Simmons of the Athletics in 1930-31.

DiMaggio won out by four points over Appling, who was second with .348. Ted Williams, Red Sox brilliant sophomore, passed Radcliff in the stretch run and finished third with .344, two points ahead of Radcliff with .342.

Hank Greenberg, Detroit Tigers' slugger who switched from first base to the outfield last season, won three individual titles, leading in home runs, with 41, in doubles, with 50, and in total bases, with 384.

Greenberg did his greatest hitting in September when he slugged out 15 homers, only three short of the record of 18 set by his teammate and successor at first base, Rudy York. Greenberg tied his teammate, Barney McCosky, Tigers' sophomore center fielder, for fifth place in hitting, with .340.

McCosky won the triple championship, hitting 19 three-baggers, thus giving the Tigers a clean sweep of the extra-base titles. McCosky also tied Doc Cramer, Red Sox outfielder who was recently traded to Washington, and Radcliff for the most hits, each getting 200. Ted Williams, Red Sox lanky sophomore, scored the most runs, 134, repeating in that department.

George Case, Washington, again led in stolen bases, pilfering 35 in 154 games as compared to his 51 in 128 games in 1939. Mike Kreevich, White Sox outfielder, was another champion who retained his laurels, leading in sacrifices for the second straight year, with 21, one less than his 1939 total.

Blue-Gray Offers Writers' 11 Awards

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The Blue & Gray Association of Montgomery offered today to purchase football trophies for an All-Southeastern team selected annually since 1927 by a committee of southern sports writers.

Executive directors of the Southeastern Conference at a recent meeting rejected a suggestion that the conference recognize the sports writers' selection as the official Southeastern eleven and award emblems.

Pitchy Bucky Walters of Cincinnati during the past season, and since has complained of occasional dizzy spells, entered a hospital here several days ago for a thorough examination.

Jurges, looking well and husky at 182 pounds, said he planned to leave Friday for Fort Lauderdale, Fla., for a rest in the sun.

The Army IN GEORGIA

FORT BENNING, Ga., Dec. 18. Officers of the Forty-Third Division of the United States Army, composed of troops from four New England states—inspected Camp Blanding today and returned here tonight.

The officers included Major General Morris B. Payen, of New London, Conn., commanding general of the Forty-Third Division; Brigadier General Harold Barker, of Providence, R. I., commanding general of the Sixty-Third Field Artillery of the Forty-Third Division; General Leonard F. Wing, of Rutland, Vt., commanding general of the Eighty-Sixth Infantry Brigade of the Forty-Third Division, and Lieutenant Colonel Alfred LeGousie, of New London, Conn., assistant chief of staff of the Forty-Third Division.

The officers are taking a "refresher" course at Fort Benning, prior to mobilization in February of troops from Maine, Vermont, Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Fort Benning CONTRACT AWARDED

Williams Lumber Company, of Columbus, has been awarded a $469,240 contract for miscellaneous buildings at Fort Benning, Fourth Corps Area headquarters reported yesterday.

CHANGES ARE MADE IN INSIGNIA POLICY

Army officers not assigned to any organization in the future will wear the insignia of their arms, service or bureaus without regimental designation, the War Department has announced. Shoulder sleeve and other distinguishing insignia will be worn only by officers actually detailed to an organization and entitled to such insignia.

Heretofore it has been the practice for officers not assigned to an organization to wear the insignia of the last group to which they were previously attached.

WHITE TO CONTINUE ON ACTIVE DUTY

Lieutenant Colonel Miller Grieve White, of Macon, National Guard officer on duty as an additional member of the War Department general staff in Washington, has been continued on active duty until next July 15, Fourth Corps Area headquarters was informed yesterday.

MANN WILL RETURN TO ACTIVE DUTY

Colonel Herbert E. Mann, retired, of Athens, will be returned to active duty at the University of Georgia, according to orders issued by the War Department in Washington yesterday. Other orders issued during the day included the assignment of Lieutenant Colonel Lloyd Henderson Granby, corps of engineers reserve, of Brunswick, to duty at Fort Screven, and of Major Irvin Herman Gerk, signal corps reserve, of Atlanta, to Dayton, Ohio.

at the CITY HALL

Preliminary work on the program for the inauguration of incoming Mayor Roy LeCraw was begun yesterday, but development of the details will await LeCraw's return to the city. He has been out of town since Monday night.

Joe L. Richardson, city clerk, and L. Glenn Dewberry, superintendent of the city hall building, have held discussions concerning arrangements for inducting the new administration at 7:30 o'clock on the night of January 6.

George I. Simons, general manager of city parks, will complete 10 years as head of the system when he begins a new four-year term in January, he said yesterday.

R. A. McMurtry, city tax collector for the past 12 years, will retire when the new administration takes over in January. McMurtry declined to offer for renomination last fall, saying he wished to quit active work. He will be 76 years old January 19, and he and Mrs. McMurtry will observe their 49th wedding anniversary on December 29.

Mayor Hartsfield yesterday began a study of previous custom concerning the Christmas holiday season. He probably will inform department heads that they may relieve employees as far as possible beginning at noon next Tuesday. Workers will return to their offices Thursday morning.

Offices of the city department of construction yesterday were being refurnished by maintenance forces at the city hall. Clarke Donaldson, construction chief, says his department needs a shining up for the new year.

J. Austin Dilbeck, board of education member-elect from the sixth ward, yesterday was passing out cigars because "I'm a great-uncle." Parents of the new 1-2-pound girl are Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Withers. The mother is the former Miss Mildred Phillips, daughter of Dilbeck's sister.

Board of education members yesterday received novelty ceramic pitcher Christmas presents from Stanley M. Hastings, principal of the O'Keefe Junior High school. The gifts are Georgia products.

Who's standing in the way of Georgia's progress now?

Not many years ago, stage coach companies objected to the establishment of railroads. "What will our stage coach employees do?" they asked.

More recently, canal transportation systems fought against extensions of railroad service that would throw canal employees out of work.

But the railroads won—and deserved to win—because they represented progress... improvement... increased efficiency. Progress is always fought but always wins.

Now it is the railroad interests themselves who are standing in the way of Georgia's progress—a strange reversal of roles.

The railroads are fighting the proposed pipe line from Port St. Joe, Fla., across Georgia to the Tennessee border.

They claim it will cause serious unemployment... seriously impair the railroads' business—a highly exaggerated prophecy on the basis of official figures which have been easily available to all.

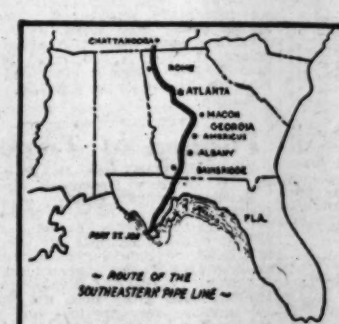

Exactly how much of the local railroads' total revenue comes from hauling petroleum products? Only 5.1 per cent—according to the Interstate Commerce Commission of the U. S. Government. Surely not a major proportion.

Exactly how much of this small percentage will be affected by the pipe line? Less than 1%, even if the new line is operated at full capacity. Certainly this is not enough to lead to serious loss or unemployment, as the railroads would have you believe.

In addition, there will probably be an increase in the railroads' short haul business, resulting from the pipe line, to offset all or part of that less than 1% loss.

Twenty-four progressive states now enjoy the benefits of pipe lines. No railroads have been bankrupted or seriously injured by pipe lines. The citizens of those states have benefited from them.

Why shouldn't the citizens of Georgia?

A Story of the American
White-Collar Girl

INSTALLMENT XVI

I helped Myrtle with the housework, and I was awfully proud to do something. I'd go round to Frankford avenue right after breakfast before it got hot. Sometimes afternoons I'd go to the Andrew Carnegie Esq. library and try to get interested in a book. You could always tell if a book was any good by the way you didn't notice the rumbling overhead. Or maybe I'd iron Mac's shirts for him, but it didn't matter how well I did. The kitchen and you couldn't work up much enthusiasm about putting a gloss on collars that the Lipstick Lady of Torredale was going to mess up. Matter of fact she faded out of the picture about then.

Myrtle, who always did detective work on the laundry basket, said she was sure Mac had fallen overboard somewhere in muddy water. We couldn't figure how but we kidded him about it and he had to come clean. He and his girl had gone for a picnic to Neshaminy Falls and hired a canoe to paddle up the creek. I guess likely he made a pass at her, or else the other way round. Anyway neither of them knew much about marine life and they tipped over. He pulled her out through a swamp and she had to spread herself in a hayfield to dry. The girl was so sore she wanted Mac to pay for a new outfit. He asked her how much and she said fifty dollars. Then Mac got sore. Pop advised him to stick to Earth. Moving instead of canoeing. Myrtle, who entered into any kind of household argument, said the girl must have lost more than clothes if she asked that much.

In spite of heat and the smell of Myrtle in the room and the smell of chlorides in the kitchen, I was never dull in that old kitchen. Pop would be sitting in the wicker chair under the wisteria vine wondering how he could wait until Mac got home to fetch something from the speakeasy. Myrtle and I wouldn't do that errand for him. When Myrtle had something on her mind she would get across to Pop, but she didn't quite like to say it direct, she'd tell me in a way he could hear it. I have the ironing board across the washbasin so I can look out the window and get a breath of air. I hear Myrtle down below in the backhouse. "That ole man better get less sociable with liquor. He ought to be ashamed to encourage bootleggin' on Orthodox street. Take note there's two ends to that street, there's a speakeasy one and an unsane asylum the other. He better stick in the middle where that Quaker Meettin' olds forth."

I made a chink in the vine so I could look down from above and see ole Pop's hand holding his newspaper. If it was shaking too much I'd go down and talk to him. Myrtle brings clothes in from the ne and sprinkles them on the big kitchen table. That was a grand old table, white as bread from rubbing. It was the kind the top fits up and turns into a settle. When the top was down I could crawl underneath when I was small and lie hidden on the bench part, watching people's feet. I remember how fast Mother's use to move, and the smell of hot jam. You got to move fast when you're rolling preserves. Myrtle's feet were quite different, a comical flat pape with the heel sticking out behind. They would forget I was under there. Once I called out: "Why are colored people's feet such a funny shape?" Myrtle was frightened she dropped the coal ruttle.

"Lucky I didn't drop that bucket on 'em, they'd be funnier yet. Money, them's preservin' feet. Feet romps out flat wuhkin' in de ineyard."

We used that table for meals. It was handy, over in the far end of the kitchen where the life window looked down the side passage. Nobody came to the door we could see them before they rang for "arrange our defences" Pop said. Under that window was the d-fashoned ice chest, the kind here the top raises up. Mac could take a long arm from the bottle light into the ice chest for a bottle beer. Over by the stove was the sink, the kind you never see any more, tall curl-over copper pigots. That kind of sink was made for gentry, Pop said, the tall urved pipes so as not to break ne china in washing it.

There's a cursing and a creak-

SYNOPSIS. This is the story of Kitty Foyle, the all-American white collar girl. She is telling it to herself, musing as most of us do sometimes, so it is all very confidential . . . and true. As she looks back over her life she realizes that she has lived the last ten of it. Lived her lifetime. While all the years before she had been preparing for this last ten. From her Pennsylvania Dutch mother came her stubborn courage, from her Irish father came her humor, her sentiment and her dreams. Dear old Pop with his whisky, his rheumatism and his crick in the neck, was through with her. But now Kitty, after attending school in the mid-west, from the home of her Aunt and Uncle, is back home in Philly for her vacation . . . she and her Pop are at the shore. AND NOW KITTY FOYLE TALKING:

ing of wicker down under the arbor, and the clatter of a pipe fallen on the brick walk. I go out and give Pop a hand to reach up from his chair. He'd go through any kind of misery to hobble round the yard, pinch off faded holly-hocks by the back fence. While he was doing that I'd fix him some hot tea and paper-thin slices of brown bread and butter. But-ter with bread spread on it, Myrtle called it.

You tell that black woman, he says, there's one advantage in being Irish. If you can't get whisky you can always make out with a cup of tea.

They both enjoyed kidding, and like sensitive people do, they knew where to stop. Myrtle said once "If yo' Pop called me nigger I'd be like to walk out and quit. But when he says Black Woman I know he means it as a compliment!"

So Pop and I take our cup of tea in the arbor, and Myrtle has hers leaning on the washtubs over our heads, and calling down through the trellis. Sometimes Lena McTaggart came in about that time of the afternoon. She wasn't so bad when she was away from Nellie Simmons, and she brought her man-jug set. When I was talking to her of course my mind went back to high school and I'd get mixed up inside. I didn't quite know whether I was an Illinois girl or a Philadelphia girl. Then Mac would come home, and Myrtle left to look after her own family. I'd set out supper for the men, and Pop and Mac and Gracie and street were all my world and a good one.

You can't clean up all outdoors. Uncle Elmer grunted as he savaged over the lawn, trying to collect every stray leaf and twig and rubbish. Aunt Hattie called it taking out blackheads. He had a permanent callus on his finger from using the clippers on the edge of the concrete sidewalk. The grass was trimmed off as sharp as one of those corn belt haircuts.

Unless you've gone through a midwest high school graduation you don't know how the world really can be cleaned up and regulated and shampooed to a climax. What Nazis some of those prairie folks would make if things happened that way. How they beat up parades, bar-b-q's, mass doings with flags and silver bands and reassuring statements.

1928 was the first class that had its whole four years in the new building and our graduation was a honey. Maybe someone should write a history of those new high schools that were being built all over the U. S. A. It would be interesting. That was the time the Real Estate Board figured the only serious problem was how everybody on Thanksgiving avenue was going to have a two-car garage without making the street narrower. From Easter on all of us kids were caught in the rising floor of events. I wouldn't be surprised it's good for people to feel so important; we were regular little Fascists.

Molly and Peg Ramsauer and I were taken into Gammagum, a secret society that was under solemn pledge to elevate the tone of the female side of the school. Fedor was editor of "Harvest," the senior annual, and he made us work like dogs. We tramped the town digging up ads from the merchants. It was a thrill when Molly and I cracked down on the Mode in Paris and sold them a full page on the promise we would buy our graduating dresses (white net) there. Some of the girls who had fat legs tried to start a movement in favor of longer dresses, but it didn't get anywhere because of course they wouldn't admit what was worrying them.

Part of the Gammagum pledge was that before being initiated you had to say if you had done anything to damage the school ethics. Like a fool I took this seriously and when the committee hidden behind the screen asked me the question I admitted that at the Princeton game Freddie Unruh kissed me back of the bandstand. I could hear the m groaning, pretending to be shocked, then they couldn't help laughing and said, "shall we tell her?" The point was that most of the kids in Gammagum had been kissed by Freddie, usually at Clubfoot lake, which was his romantic specialty. I don't guess anybody east of the Alleghenies knows how much innocent kissing can be done in a field of tall corn, except it tickles your ears, the corn tassels. Freddie was our triple-threat—football, baseball, and in a coupe. He wasn't much threat in his lessons, he got the idea of wearing dark glasses because he said the light hurt his eyes; but actually it was so he could take a little nap in Latin class. He always carried a comb in his vest, you could tell when he was awake because he'd run it through his hair. Mr. Sheldon said once, "Freddie, if you'd comb the text as faithfully as you do your hair I could give you a better mark." Freddie didn't worry, he was a star halfback and already had a scholarship offer from a state university.

Reminds me how I always had to explain to Wyn that Princeton didn't mean New Jersey. Out that way there's only one Princeton, Illinois. They were our big rival in debating and football and baseball. When the Princeton High school band went into uniform we nearly went crazy until we got one too.

What every Soldier and his Family should Know.

Will I ever get a day off, or a day? How often?

A pass, the written permission on a unit commander allowing a soldier a short period of absence from post or camp, will be issued, normally at weekends. Such a pass will permit a soldier to proceed to some near-by city or town, returning in time to resume his duties at the start of the following Monday's schedule.

During the prospective training period it is probable that weekend passes will be issued by commanders of such units as batteries and companies with a fair amount of regularity. In most cases only soldiers assigned over the weekend company duties, such as kitchen and barracks "police," and to hard duty, will have to forego weekend leave until a later time.

Withholding of a weekend pass is a form of "company punishment" often meted out in cases of slight misconduct or negligence. Will a leave be long enough for me to go home?

In a case of a serious family emergency, a relatively long leave may be granted. However, there are limiting circumstances, such as the distance which may intervene between the soldier's station and a home and the exigencies of the military situation, which may require his continuous presence at his post of duty. A considerate attitude will be shown, however, in cases where a soldier's temporary presence at his home may seem to be demanded. The day-by-day record of the applicant in performance of his duties often is an important factor considered by his commander in granting or refusing a request for extended leave.

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—The morning hours until 11:05 a. m. are likely to be a contradictory time when your affairs seem to be progressing favorably and later meet a dead end. It would likely be better to try and complete things before 11:05 a. m. or wait until after 11:05 a. m. when it is a favorable period to work along progressive lines in things that are solid, conservative, in intellectual pursuits, travel and undertaking new beginnings.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—The entire day is likely to be a busy, active time, but it is also a time when you may feel unsettled, having difficulty in making yourself properly understood, or you may have a tendency to look on things from an unfavorable standpoint. This will be a day when you should be careful of contracts and everything of a written nature.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—Energy and enthusiasm in literary efforts, industrial pursuits, and in dealings with people interested in these types of work should be favorably received during the entire day.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—If you have someone special to contact, and want your interview to proceed smoothly, make your engagement before 11:05 a. m. Between 11:05 a. m. and 12:05 p. m. favors work requiring mental activity. The afternoon and evening hours favors general business activity.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—Previous to 2:03 p. m. favors seeking favors and for promises. After 2:03 p. m. favors consultations, seeking advice from brokers, educational people and sports.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—The combined influence of the day suggest finishing things already started, for this does not appear to be an auspicious day for the beginning of new affairs. The influences operating tend towards a scattering of affairs and a lack of concentration, so you may not be well versed in all the intricacies of any new undertaking.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—Public matters or dealings with the public where finances are involved, or where it is necessary to use diplomacy, are especially favored until 3:31 p. m. After 3:31 p. m. a feeling of nervousness may incline to mistakes and misadventure. An excellent period to use caution in whatever you sign.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—Monetary affairs may be difficult today. The underlying trend of the entire day is towards unwise optimism, making this an inauspicious day for new and important undertakings, plans, decisions and changes.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—The entire day is likely to be a busy, active time, but it is also a time when you may feel unsettled, having difficulty in making yourself properly understood, or you may have a tendency to look on things from an unfavorable standpoint. This will be a day when you should be careful of contracts and everything of a written nature.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—The early morning hours and until 10:23 a. m. favor general business activities, but caution should be observed to avoid sudden decisions or making radical departures from the usual. After 10:23 a. m., an excellent time to stick to routine.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—The morning hours and until 12:29 p. m. are filled with influences that produce harmony, peace and agreeableness at which time you can put forth much effort in matters dealing with land, literary pursuits and dealings with the public. The afternoon and evening hours, you are likely to have a feeling that you are balked at every turn you make. Endeavor to keep your poise and do not make sudden changes.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—Previous to 3:03 p. m. favors consultations, seeking advice from brokers, bankers, educational people and sports. The evening hours favor social interests.

STRANGE—Startling evidence that Queen Elizabeth of England, whose strength and deep voice were notorious for a lady of gentle birth, was actually not a woman but a man, will be advanced on Strange As It Seems, over WGST at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

Jackson Wheeler, as master of ceremonies, will present the revealing data on England's Virgin Queen. Research men have delved for more than a year to obtain the historical material for the dramatization.

MUSIC HALL—Christmas is being celebrated in the Music Hall over WSB at 8 o'clock tonight when Bing Crosby will present the Choral Society from Chicago with Donald Crisp and Allen Jenkins as his Hollywood guests. This will be in the nature of a double celebration, for Robin Burns will return to the hall following a New York vacation.

MAIDS AND JOHN SCOTT TROTTER's orchestra will all enter into the Yuletide spirit for the broadcast, Bing sings "Adeste Fidelis," "Silent Night," "Along the Santa Fe Trail," "Only Forever," and "Along the Way to Waikiki." He'll duet "The Five O'Clock Whistle" with Connie Boswell and her single numbers are "Remember Me" and "Nobody's Sweetheart."

MUSICAL—Virginia Simms, vocalist with Kay Kyser's orchestra, and Buddy Clark, baritone radio star, will return as guests of Raymond Paige and the orchestra during a special Christmas program on Musical Americana, over WSB at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

Miss Simms will sing Brahms' "Lullaby" and Clark's solo will be "Trade Winds." Orchestral portions will be featured by a new arrangement of Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys."

The program includes: "The One I Love Belongs to Somebody Else" by Itham Jones and Gus Kahn. "Trade Winds" (Buddy Clark) by Charles Tobias and Cliff Friend. "March of the Toys" by Victor Schertzinger. "I'd Know You Anywhere" (Ginny Sims) by Jimmy McHugh and Johnny Mercer. "March of the Toys," by Victor Herbert. "The Last Time I Saw Paris" (Buddy Clark) by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein.

"Lullaby" (Raymond Paige's orchestra and Ginny Sims) by Johannes Brahms.

HENRY—When the Christmas spirit moves into the Aldrich home just ahead of three uninvited holiday house-guests of Henry's, it is a question which will leave first in "The Aldrich Family," starring Ezra Stone, over WSB at 7:30 tonight.

When Mr. Aldrich has to resort to sleeping on the Chippendale sofa to avoid pillow fights upstairs between Henry's prep school pals, the lawyer's patience is knocked for a row of Christmas trees. To top the rest of the troubles, Aunt Sue's cat walks distastefully out on her mistress. Only its timely recovery by Henry's now chaste guests re-establishes peace and good will for a time at least in the Aldrich menage.

"THE LIGHT OF CHRISTMAS"—Shown here are the three sixth grades of Whiteford Avenue school who enacted the birth of Christ in their pageant, "The Light of Christmas," directed by teachers of the three grades, Mrs. Thelma Coley, Mrs. Thelma Woodruff and Miss Sarah Austin. This program, presented Wednesday morning, is one of many being given this week in Atlanta and Fulton county schools, which close for the Christmas holidays on Friday. The school children made their own costumes for the event.

"THE NATIVITY"—Pupils of the E. D. Rivers school are shown here as they gave the scene of the Nativity in their Christmas pageant yesterday morning. Left to right, Dianne Rae Williamson, an "Angel," Ledlie Conger, "Joseph," Betty Burke, "Mary," and Theodora Owens Black, an "Angel." Joan Laney and Ed Dicker read the story as it was enacted.

Schools Begin Presentation of Yule Pageants

Holidays Begin Tomorrow for City, County Youngsters.

City and county schools yesterday began Christmas holiday festivities preparatory to closing on Friday. Pageants and singing of carols mark the school festivities.

Fair school will give a pageant in the school auditorium at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Miss Belle Cockrell will direct the program, "Christmas Joy," and boys and girls from the fourth, fifth and sixth grades will make up a chorus which will sing carols. Longino School students will present a cantata, "Santa's Return," with their chorus of 125 children under the direction of Mrs. Beryl Miller at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

A pageant, "The Nativity," and a reading of the "Story of the Other Wise Man" will be included on the Christmas program at the North Fulton School at 8 o'clock tonight for the P-T-A. and Friday morning for the students. R. L. Lawrence, Jr., directs the chorus of 50 voices in Christmas carols. Reading will be by Helen Milburn. Anne Baril will play the part of the "Madonna" and Earle Zantis will be "Joseph."

At Russell High school the students will present "Come, Let Us Adore Him," at 7:30 o'clock tonight. Those in charge are: Hoyt T. Griffin, glee club; Mrs. Kate Atkinson, pageant; Ruth Miller, pianist; and Mrs. T. H. Fitzgerald, costumes.

The P-T-A. of Central Park school in East Point will sponsor a pageant, "The Prince of Peace," with the school pupils, at the East Point city auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight. Charles Carden Snow, music teacher at the school, will direct the musical program.

Several original plays by students, and a pageant, "Why the Chimes Rang" are on the Christmas program at Luckie Street school at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon. The sixth grade will give the pageant. Tomorrow morning the fourth grade will give another Christmas play, "Santa Strikes," in the school auditorium. Other programs will be held in the classrooms.

Primary pupils at Chattahoochee school will give "The Birthday of a King" at 9 o'clock Friday morning. Miss Elizabeth Heaton will direct the glee club in several carols.

A pageant depicting the nativity will be presented at Bolton school at 9 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Homer McDonald and Mrs. George Adams are in charge of the play, and Mrs. Polly Evans leads the chorus. Joseph and Mary are played by Boyce Peyton and Aite Millwood.

Other Christmas programs were given yesterday at Connally, Clark Howell, Kirkwood, Couch, People Street, Goldsmith and Georgia Avenue schools.

Tree Dedication At College Park

A living Christmas tree—a large pine growing on the site of College Park's new civic center—will be dedicated at 7:30 o'clock tonight in ceremonies led by eight-year-old Wanda Harris, daughter of Mayor George W. Harris. Her father will be master of ceremonies and introduce Senator-elect Hugh Couch, former mayor of College Park.

Also on the dedication program will be Dr. J. L. Baggett, pastor of the College Park Baptist church; the Richardson High school band and carolers from the student bodies of Samuel R. Young, Neely and Longino schools.

Employees of Fulton To Get Checks Early

Santa Claus will arrive early for a majority of Fulton county employees this year. Monthly pay checks, aggregating more than $120,000, will be distributed Saturday to approximately 600 county employees. Usually, December checks are distributed on the 23d day of the month,
